6282-3	Patrick Fontein	RPS	Urban growth	B2.1 Providing for growth in a quality compact urban form	Acknowledge the factors effecting intensification and the redevelopment likelihood of a site includes: improvement value verses capital value, parcel size, the number of existing dwellings on a site, the increase of value when re-developed. If a site is to be re-developed related to the maximum extra dwellings able to be developed, the likely capacity utilisation of owners who chose to redevelop and the development chance of properties. These constraints mean only 20 - 50 per cent of intensification potential will actually be developed.	3199	New Zealand Institute of Architects	Support
