No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):all vehicles should be self contained and added to this ,all aspects of the stay should be contained within the vehicle and no washing and hanging of clothes outside of van.Exception being a BBQ ,if allowed under fire season. ## Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

I am disabled and also belong to number of motor home groups and speak for my self and not those clubs/organizations.

If you are proposing marking out spaces for parking ,make sure they are large enough to park Motor homes and not regular car spaces. Vehicles can be 2500 mm wide plus mirrors can go to nearly 3000mm . they can be around 12000 mm in length , some times height may need to be considered ,if trees are around so height is around 4300mm...please note this is not how it is described in traffic regulations. Being disable ,need spaces for us guys, not only for overnight parking but daily living.My disability includes resting every 60 minutes and sleeping each afternoon.

Some other consideration around prohibited parking in reserves. Is it normal for all of us to know ,which area is a reserve or not ....so consideration would need to sign post all reserves that they in fact a reserve and overnight camping is prohibited.

Another consideration for action would be to prohibit washing of dishes and clothing in any council controlled toilet block... I don't like these little vans washing dishes in a tub on ground beside their van and then tipping water onto ground,nor to see them washing dishes inside in hand basin of toilet blocks.

I am aware of some face book pages having been set up to oppose any freedom camping in Auckland telling the members how to vote ,so you should be wary of bulk respnse. Waiheke Island:

I don't necessarily agree with 2 days on Island and then have to ferry off, as only way to dump.

We as motor home are fully certified for 10 people ,so gives us great capacity, especially as most times is just the 2 of us.

- Fresh water tanks: 4 L per person per day (12 L per person minimum); eg. 24 litres is required for 2 people for 3 days & 48 litres is required for 4 people for 3 days;
- A sink: (via a smell trap/water trap connected to a water tight sealed waste water tank);
- Grey/black waste water tank: 4 L per person per day (12 L per person minimum, vented and monitored if capacity is less than the fresh water tank);
- Evacuation hose: (3 m for fitted tanks) or long enough to connect to a sealed portable tank;
- Sealable refuse container (rubbish bin with a lid).
- Toilet (portable or fixed): Minimum capacity 1 L per person per day (3 L net holding tank capacity per person minimum);

We have 34 litre toilet tanks so could gives us 17 days on Island for 2 people , along with 205 litres grey water and 350 Lt of fresh water.

We also have fitted (many motor homes do as well) a SOG system that allows the toilet to operate with out need for chemicals, thus allowing us to use septic tanks for disposal.

So would suggest a longer limit on self contained motor homes that have SOG system( there maybe other companies with same results) fitted and they can demonstrate capacity for 7 days minimum.

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain)

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain): 9am is unnecessarily restrictive when relocation to one's next campsite is perhaps only a couple of hours drive. A separate general rule for overnight parking in business areas would be more appropriate.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

Prohibited site

Heron Park 1625-1627 Great North Road, Waterview, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? No – freedom camping should be allowed subject to the general rules

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, Shorter stays are already the norm for most freedom campers, so a stricter rule is not necessary

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A later departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it more likely that they will visit local businesses, 10am is a typical check-out time if you are paying for accommodation, so it makes sense to align with this, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Submission to Auckland Council on the Proposed new freedom camping in vehicles bylaw.

OUR SUBMISSION

1. Federated Farmers welcomes the opportunity to submit to Auckland Council on the Proposed Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw.
2. Freedom Camping is one of the hot topics that directly impact rural communities in Auckland. Our rural communities see thousands of campers parking up on roadsides and reserves around their properties. This has naturally let up during covid for the mean time.
3. Federated Farmers of New Zealand is a primary sector organisation that represents farmers, and other rural businesses. Federated Farmers has a long and proud history of representing the needs and interests of New Zealand farmers.
4. The Federation aims to add value to its members' businesses. Our key strategic outcomes include the need for New Zealand to provide an economic and social environment within which:
  - (1) Our members may operate their businesses in a fair and flexible commercial environment;
  - (2) Our members' families and their staff have access to services essential to the needs of the rural community; and
  - (3) Our members adopt responsible management and environmental practices.
5. Some of our members share boundaries with, or live near, freedom camping sites, while many others have issues with freedom campers directly impacting or entering their private land. They report experiencing, among other things:
  - Human-waste, soiled toilet paper, and rubbish near their yards, houses, driveways, or in roadside paddocks.
  - Fires being lit despite fire bans.
  - Unregistered dogs, dogs straying and worrying stock/wildlife and possibly carrying sheep measles.
  - People cutting access paths through sand dunes or across private farmland, including at sensitive times of the year such as lambing or fawning.
  - Vehicles blocking gates or interfering with stock movement.
  - Noise and anti-social behaviour.
  - Trespass issues.
  - Semi-permanent structures in use indicating long-term camping.
6. There are discussions going on at both national and regional levels about the future of tourism in New Zealand and what sustainable tourism means. We have arguably reached a time when user pays principles must apply to freedom camping so that we can better protect our environment, especially the treasured coastal areas managed by council.

7. We wish to express our support for the governments proposed increase in infringement capability to $1000 as of 30th November 2021. This will need to be included in the bylaw.
8. The main concern that comes from our rural members is with regards to the lack of rural monitoring and enforcement in our rural communities. Our members were disheartened reading councils' approach to enforcement and believe this should not be left to discretion of staff.
9. Freedom campers need to be held to account, like driving a car on New Zealand roads, you have an obligation to comply with speed limits. As soon as discretion is added we believe that behaviour change is minimised. This is particularly important when tourism reopens as rental agencies can then inform people there will be fines if they breach the bylaw.
10. We also feel like the matrix for compliance needs changing. By renting or purchasing a camper you have every opportunity to research and know your obligations. Council is doing a good job in creating reasonable and workable rules which every freedom camper can interpret. In relation to rental agencies, it is our understanding that the Freedom Camping Act 2011 allows for rental services to pay/accept the fine on behalf of the renter.
11. Freedom camping tourists are usually budget constrained and therefore spend less when visiting Auckland. It can be viewed that the community is paying via rates for the freedom campers stay.

Relief Sought

- Increase monitoring of freedom camping hotspots in rural areas particularly during peak times of the year.
- Establish a more stringent enforcement program.

Questions

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

12. Federated Farmers does support the use of general rules for freedom camping in areas not prohibited and restricted under the bylaw. We support this as Council's proposal is simple, and workable and clear to educate freedom campers.
13. Education will be an important factor in the success of the general rules which is why simple and workable rules will benefit council when educating local and international freedom campers.

Do you want to provide feedback on any of the proposed general rules?

14. Federated Farmers supports the proposed general rule 1 to be certified self-contained Option C. We are particularly pleased to hear the recent changes to the certification process requiring toilets to be non-portable.
15. Federated Farmers supports general rule two Option C setting a two-night stay rule.
16. Proposed general rule three is reasonable for Option C for a 9am departure time on their final day permitted at the site.
17. Proposed rule four Option B to have a two week stand down is appropriate for this bylaw. Council does however need to consider the wording of the rule to ensure that freedom campers cannot drive to the next road along and camp which is what has been occurring in areas such as Gisborne and Taranaki. Technically a camper can camp for several weeks in one community so long as they move roads.

18. There are concerns around all rural New Zealand that setting limits and vehicle restrictions will just push campers further away from town where rules are monitored to rural areas. The two-night stay rule needs to be appropriately monitored and enforced. Council may need to investigate ways in which monitoring can be improved with better reporting tools and potentially self-reporting freedom camping intentions sent in by campers.

Do you want to provide feedback on any of the designated Prohibited or Restricted areas we've proposed?

19. Council should be consulting with neighbouring landowners who will potentially have an influx of additional freedom campers as certain hotspots for visitors become prohibited.
20. As a member driven organisation representing all of rural Auckland we have recommended our members should address localised issues with council themselves.

Ends

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Some living full time in their vans, some only weekenders, but mostly all responsible. Don't assume we are all irresponsible and that we don't care about our environment. Bring in some rules, the majority of us are OK about that. Just make sure the rules are enforced so we can all enjoy our country.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')

Freedom camping has been an only option during lockdown. The council refused access to their camp sites stating that they have high safety standards so we need to find a private site that does not have the same standards. The council have completely neglected it's duty of care for a substantial number of well meaning peopling who have been locked in fields whilst the council cut all water supplies and refused access to facilities. We just paid a massive rates bill and then was made homeless in our campervan. Disgrace

I am tired of hearing stories about people finding poo etc in parks and blaming freedom campers.

Everybody has to do their business somewhere, and freedom campers become a convenient scape goat for what is a human need.

Freedom campers, such as ourselves are Auckland (also Waikato and BoP) rate payers - we are your people, we are not 'others', we deserve to use your facilities and not be shunned and locked out of using them. The way some freedom campers have been treated in Auckland (by the council) over lockdown has been awful.

Shame on you Auckland City Council, every reserve and park in Auckland City with a carpark, should allow 2 or more properly self-contained vans. If you dont like the configuration of some vehicles, pass a bylaw on what you consider a properly configured self-contained vehicle.

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

As a resident of Matheson Bay, we participated in the trial for Auckland Council, which moved the camping to the grassed area accessed by Matheson Bay. The community saw this as a positive event. However, post the trial, freedom camping has become unfettered. On Anniversary Weekend, we have had up to 27 vans [and some tents] on the reserve [which by Rodney bylaws should hold 6 only].Over all the time of freedom camping, the missing ingredient has been management by Council; now it has reached the stage that unfettered camping has lost the community support - unsustainable numbers; poor hygiene and personal waste disposal; abuse of the council facilities [eg washing up oily cooking items in the toilet/washroom area] and failure to abide by reserve regulations. Now the community has lost any wish to support freedom camping and are thrilled that the Reserves Act will allow Matheson Bay reserve to return to use for daytrippers, along with a promise by Rodney Local Board to have Compliance Officers to manage parking, water usage, jet skis, litter, behaviour etc. A great outcome.Now our concern is that Rodney Local Board might still be able to override Auckland Council's Freedom Camping Act and legislate for specific local area freedom camping. Also frustrating was that the Council Rangers worked 9-5, Monday to Friday - the worst times for Freedom camping Management are Friday evening to Sunday afternoon - and never a ranger available. Our local observations were that at no time did Council staff see the Matheson Bay van influx and the abuse of the reserve area - where locals have planted almost 4,000 native trees over three annual days, assisted with great support by the Council's Volunteer conservation officers.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

My wife and I have been motor homing in our nz made shelf contained camper van and members NZMCA for the last 15 years , we are retired and love our trips away staying and meeting like wise people all over the country. It is sad to see council's taking a hard line approach to this recreational activity, a big percentage are retired and responsible people out to enjoy the years left , you build recreation facilities rugby ,football, league , netball ,swimming leisure Center's for the younger age group's at huge costs so why not provide adequate areas for this purpose and encourage responsible use , a prime example of this is Hatfields beach where a large area near the toilet block which hardly gets used could be provided for camper vans and leave the beach frontage for day trippers , this is just a small example, let's all enjoy our country together .. 😊

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Good afternoonWe live opposite the St Heliers Bowls Club and Vellenoweth Green. Freedom campers regularly use the car parks at night. Almost without exception, when they leave, there are wet wipes or toilet paper on the ground. This then get either blown onto our property or gets caught in the hedge surrounding the sporting facilities. I have phoned council to lodge a complaint, but never hear anything back. The situation has improved since the border was closed, but still occurs. The freedom campers often keep us awake with music playing, or keeping the engine running to heat the vehicle .Can you please prohibit freedom camping from this area? I'm sure that other parks will be experiencing similar problems. I realise that camper in the future will be required to have a permanent toilet. Unfortunately it doesn't mean that they get used as the occupants have to empty them. They find it much easier to do. their business in the car parks or in the park.Thank

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

We are permanent residents with young children. Last summer many spots we go to with our children early in the am (dogs have to be off beach by 10) were occupied by people sleeping in cars. It is a very jarring use of public recreational facilities and severely curtails enjoyment when beaches are clogged up with vehicles screened up windows and bodies. Kids ask questions about why people are in their cars at what is far into the morning for us and the whole scene with dirty dishes towels etc is deeply unpleasant. We have a campsite that's fit for purpose and a wonderful spot. sleeping on beachfronts impedes access and enjoyment there is extremely limited parking on these beaches and this kind of camping in what is an urban area is not at all inline with the ideology of driving and parking up for a night It requires a ferry and is a destination not a stopover Cojncol does not police it and it creates all sorts of unpleasant tension

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

We live in a beautiful Country with lots of things to see and do. For everyone excluding freedom Campers , places we stay overnight so we can visit these beautiful spots in NZ need to be paid for. I don't see why it should be any different for Campervans, Motorhomes etc. These spots have toilet blocks etc available for use for any members of the Public visiting these spots and these facilities need to be maintained and upgraded from time to time. This costs money and is paid for by ratepayers. Therefore anyone using these facilities for some time and not just for a 'one off' time need to pay. We have travelled to various other Countries and there is always a charge for entry into parks and to use toilet facilities. This money can go towards keeping these facilities in A1 condition which is necessary. People have spent a lot of money to either hire or buy these modes of transport and need to then also pay to stay somewhere in them overnight . Overseas travellers need to pay a fee to stay somewhere in our Country while looking at our beautiful sights. Most of these sights and walks in the parks, lakes etc are free for a start. We have many motor Camps around the Country that these vehicles can stay at and support. People come to NZ to see the sights and visit our Clean green Country which has a lot to offer. They would be prepared and indeed expect to pay for this privilege so therefore this is the answer, 'Pay your way' like all other holiday makers.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

I am very disappointed by your survey - the questions we want answered is how can we as rate payers prohibit and restrict more areas from freedom campers. It is astonishing that you would allow freedom campers to stay on mass in any residential street in Auckland. Rather than highlighting what areas are prohibited or restricted from freedom campers you should be specifying a limited number of areas freedom campers can safely stay in Auckland. We have seen the damage done by freedom campers in some of our most pristine environments - they bring very little financial gains to the Auckland region but leave a huge amount of rubbish and use of our amenities that rate payers pay for. I would only support this bylaw change if the rate payers were able to choose what areas in their region where freedom campers were allowed to stay not the other way round - just remember who you are serving - the residents of Auckland.

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Our rights as property owners are under siege with this ridiculous proposal. Basically anyone will be able to park up where they like other than these very few restricted areas. I already have idiots outside my house having sex, smoking bongos and dumping rubbish. Thanks for proposing that this sort of behavior will encouraged. There is NO Way this should happen.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area?

Restricted sites

Gulf Harbour Marina, Hammerhead Reserve 40 Gulf Harbour Drive, Guld Harbour. Do you agree that freedom camping should be restricted in this area? Yes – restricted freedom camping should be allowed, but with different restrictions

Which of the proposed restrictions for this area would you want to change at Gulf Harbour Marina?

What do you think is the appropriate maximum number of vehicles allowed at this site?

Other (please specify): 5+

What do you think is the appropriate maximum stay at this site?

Other (please specify): 2 nights

What do you think is the appropriate departure time at this site?

Other (please specify): 9am

What do you think is the appropriate no-return period at this site?

Other (please specify): 4 weeks

Where do you think the freedom camping parking spaces should be located within this area? at the northern or the middle of the beach only. Otherwise it will interfere with boaties using the boatramp and locals. It needs to be restricted as the beach is small and over crowded with vehicles, campers and boaties.

Do you have any other comments you would like to make about this area? There should be more restricted areas which limit the number of campers and designated areas including most beaches on the hibiscus coast, not just left as a free for all for campers to take over beaches and beach fronts.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

On page 8 of the draft Hibiscus and Bays Local Parks Management Plan the Council says:

'The local board will have an advocacy role in unformed legal roads, where they have a park function; drainage reserves, where they have both a stormwater and park function; and road to road accessways, where they provide an informal recreation and access function'

In a good number of the plans there are statements like:

Much of the dune system along the coastal frontage of the park is located on unformed legal road and is out of scope of this plan.

While Auckland Council maintains this land, it is under the jurisdiction of Auckland Transport. The general policies and provisions of this plan will guide the local board's position and any future input into management or development of this area where it is sought.

In the 'Frequently Asked Questions' about the proposed bylaw the Council says:

'The Freedom Camping Act 2011 recognises that some areas may not be suitable for any freedom camping. It also enables council to set restrictions that will help to prevent harm and balance competing uses in other areas.

This means our Bylaw can identify areas where all freedom camping is prohibited, and areas where restrictions are needed to manage how and where freedom camping can occur, as long as these meet the Act's criteria.

Most (but not all) of the beachfront at (Big) Manly is not a public reserve under the Reserves Act 1977 so the Council does not have, and has stated that it does not intend to have, a Reserve Management Plan for it. Although most of it is mown grass and sand dune with trees it is a public road (presumably held under the Local Government Act) under the jurisdiction of Auckland Transport.

If it was a public reserve freedom camping would not be permitted unless a Reserve Management Plan (or some other Council decision) for it says otherwise.

As a public road under the Local Government Act, and not mentioned in the Bylaw as a prohibited or restricted area, when the Bylaw is adopted freedom camping will be permitted there 'as of right'.

Allowing freedom camping on (Big) Manly Beach – one of the Hibiscus Coast's most important recreation assets - would be most inappropriate. The beachfront there should be subject to the same freedom camping provisions as apply to reserves held under the Reserves Act 1977 and freedom camping should not be permitted on it (just as it won't be permitted on the public reserves at the other local beaches like Tindalls, Matakatia, Little Manly, Stanmore Bay, Arkles Bay, Red Beach, Orewa and Waiwera).

Submission:

5.1 That that part of Big Manly Beach which is legal road be included in Schedule 1 of the bylaw as a place where freedom camping is prohibited.

5.2 Freedom camping will, by default, not be allowed on those other parts of the beach frontage that are public reserves (unless the Reserves Management Plans for them say otherwise).

7.0 CAMPERVAN PARKING AT BEACHES IN THE HIBISCUS COAST

Unless expressly permitted by the relevant Reserves Management Plan, campervans will not be able to park on reserves that are held pursuant to the Reserves Act 1977.

However, unless the bylaw specifically prohibits it campervans will in future be permitted 'as of right' to park on roads and off-road parking areas – and stay in each road or off-road parking area for a maximum of two nights every two weeks.

At several beaches in the Hibiscus Coast public roads adjoin the public reserves and there is the potential for campervan owners to seek to avoid the reserve parking prohibition by parking on the road – and the Council not being able to do anything about it. The rules need to be consistent. At a number of places freedom camping on these roads is undesirable and they should be subject to the same controls as the adjoining reserves.

Three apparently homeless persons are 'living' in two cars and a van on one of these roads – the parking area at the end of Stanmore Bay Road – now, and accosting people in an intimidatory fashion when they visit the beach .

Submission:

7.1 That the following roads be added to 'Schedule 1 – Designated Areas Where Freedom Camping Is Prohibited'

- Ngapara Street where it adjoins the Red Beach Waterfront Reserve. (See page 195 Draft Local Parks Management Plan – DLPMP);
- Arkles Strand where it adjoins the Arkles Bay Beachfront Reserve. (See page 20 DLPMP);
- Matakatia Parade where it adjoins the Matakatia Parade Beachfront Reserve. (See page 133 DLPMP);
- The end of De Luen Avenue where it adjoins the De Luen Avenue (Tindalls Bay) Beachfront Reserve. (See page 67 DLPMP);
- The parking area at the end of Stanmore Bay Road where it adjoins the Stanmore Bay Park Reserve. (See page 222 DLPMP);
- Langton Road from Claude Road/Arun Street to the Stanmore Bay Beach East Reserve. (See Page 220 DLPMP);
- The road leading to the beachfront from Moreton Drive/Glamis Avenue at (Big) Manly;
- Beach Road from Laurence Street to the (Big) Manly Beachfront
- Brown Street from the Beach Road to the (Big) Manly Beachfront
- Whangaparaoa Road where it adjoins the Little Manly Beach Reserve. (See page 125 DLPMP);
- The Hibiscus Coast Highway (including the metal dumping area adjacent to the bridge) where it adjoins the Hatfields Beach Reserve. (See page 103 DLPMP); (and)

- The turnaround area in The Strand at Waiwera

8.0 LAND STATUS CRITICAL

Whether or not freedom camping is permitted in future will (in the first instance) depend on the land's status:

- If the land isn't a reserve freedom camping will be permitted 'as of right' (unless specifically prohibited or restricted).
- If the land is a reserve held pursuant to the Reserves Act 1977 freedom camping will be prohibited (unless specifically authorised by a Reserves Management Plan that has been prepared in the manner required by the Reserves Act 1977).

It will be essential therefore that the land status of all 'Council owned' properties be clear. There is currently a lot of inconsistency and confusion.

For instance:

The Land Known As Metro Park East (39.9 ha)

- The Council says in its Draft Local Parks Management Plan for the Hibiscus Coast that this is a reserve held under the Reserves Act 1977 – classified as 'Recreation Reserve' and 'Local Purpose Reserve – Esplanade'.
- In the proposed by law the land is listed as 'non reserve land' where freedom camping is prohibited.
- On the maps when one googles the address (the google maps) the land is not shaded green (as is normal for reserves) but is (inconsistently) marked:
  - Metro Park (not Metro Park East);
  - Millwater Park Run;
  - Metro Park Parking; (and)
  - Millwater Sportsground Stormwater Pond.

The Land Known As Metro Park West (14.7 ha)

- The Council says in its Draft Local Parks Management Plan for the Hibiscus Coast this is a reserve held under the Reserves Act 1977 – classified as 'Recreation Reserve'.
- On the google maps the land is not shaded green nor is it identified in any way as a reserve.

The Land On The Corner of Arran Drive and Millwater Parkway

- The Council identifies this land as a reserve in the list of reserves in its Draft Local Parks Management Plan – as a part of the Metro Park East Recreation Reserve.
- The land is extensively used as a reserve. (A part of the Orewa Estuary walkway/cycleway)
- On the google maps the land is identified as 'Emily's Reserve' but is not shaded green, in the normal way, as a reserve.

The Large Area Of land Bounded By Bonair Crescent At Millwater

- The Council does not identify this land as a reserve in the list of reserves in its Draft Local Parks Management Plan.

- The land is extensively used as a reserve – A flat mown area adjoining several very attractively planted stormwater ponds, with numerous concrete paths, seats, a children’s playground and a public toilet block on it.
- On the google maps the land is not shaded green in the normal way but is identified as:
  - Bonair Reserve
  - Bonair Park
  - Millens Park
  - Bonair Playground.

The Land Known As Gulf Harbour Reserve (5,780 sq m)

- The Council says in its 'Draft Local Parks Management Plan for the Hibiscus Coast' that this is a reserve held under the Reserves Act 1977 – classified as a 'Recreation Reserve'.
- On the google maps the land is not shaded green in the normal way nor is it identified as a reserve.

The Land Known as Cedar Reserve on the Whangaparaoa Peninsula

- The google maps show, coloured green, a reserve in Cedar Terrace titled 'Cedar Reserve'.
- The Draft Local Parks Management Plan for the Hibiscus Coast does not include this reserve.

The Land Known As Victor Eves Park, Orewa (19.1041 ha)

- The Council says in its Draft Local Parks Management Plan that this is a reserve on both sides of Westhoe Road – including land on the western side of the road occupied by the Orewa Bridge Club – classified as 'Recreation Reserve'. It also identifies as a "Management Issue"

'Unauthorised camping and long term campervan/5th wheel parking within the park'.

- The google maps (shaded green) identify, as a reserve, only the land on the western side of Westhoe Road – i.e. exclude all the land occupied by the Bridge Club.

Submission

8.1 Whether freedom camping is permitted or not on any land is determined according to whether the particular piece of land is held under the Reserves Act 1977 or the Local Government Act 2002. It is therefore critical that the legal status of all land owned or managed by the Council be clear. As the above examples show, the current situation is very confusing.

8.2 That the Council ensure it has a complete and accurate record of all properties in the Hibiscus Coast held as reserves under the Reserves Act 1977'.

8.3 That the Draft Bays and Hibiscus Coast Local Parks Management Plan, the google maps, and the draft Bylaw be updated to ensure completeness, correctness and consistency.

8.4 All land used for recreation that is not held as a reserve under the Reserves Act 1977 and which is consequently not included in the Hibiscus Coast Local Parks Management Plan, where the Council believes freedom camping should be prohibited, will need to be added to Schedule 1 in the bylaw.

8.5 We suspect the work that is being done to prepare Local Parks Management Plans and to identify places where freedom camping should be prohibited or restricted will identify many situations where land that has been purchased or vested by developers for recreational purposes is not held as a reserve pursuant to the Reserves Act 1977 (and therefore not subject to the intergenerational protection that that Act provides). The Council needs to address this matter.

9.0 ENFORCEMENT

The draft bylaw proposes that anyone be allowed to 'freedom camp' on any local public road or off-road carpark. In the list of commonly asked questions it says:

'For the purposes of this Bylaw, we consider freedom camping to mean people staying in vehicles overnight as part of leisure travel or because they are choosing to live in a vehicle voluntarily for lifestyle reasons.

The central government did not intend the Freedom Camping Act 2011 to manage homelessness, and the council doesn't intend to use it for that purpose.

The adoption of new freedom camping rules may create additional stress for Aucklanders experiencing homelessness, who may feel stigmatised or fear enforcement action if the proposed bylaw is adopted.

However, the council has committed to taking a humane enforcement approach to protect vulnerable members of the Auckland community. This will include connecting people to social services support where appropriate.

When someone is living in a vehicle due to homelessness, our compliance staff will only intervene if they are causing an obstruction or a nuisance. These impacts on public health and safety are managed under other bylaws, not freedom camping regulation'.

In the bylaw itself, it says on page 2:

'Council does not intend to use this Bylaw to manage homelessness (people staying in a vehicle involuntarily). Council instead takes a compassionate approach to protect vulnerable Aucklanders'.

The practical effect of this seems to be:

That so long as they:

- vacate the space by 9am on the day of departure;
- not return to the same road for two weeks; (and)
- comply with the existing road rules that control parking – like lane marking and parking time limitations) anyone can:

- park for up to two nights;
- in a certified self-contained vehicle;
- on any public road or off road carpark throughout the City (unless parking at that particular place is prohibited by Schedule 1 of the bylaw)

but that, in the case of persons experiencing homelessness, the Council intends to take a light handed enforcement approach and will only intervene if the campervan etc or its inhabitant(s) are causing an obstruction or a nuisance.

Submission:

9.1 I do not agree with the Council's proposed enforcement approach.

9.2 Expressed another way, what the Council appears to be saying is:

'We are introducing a new bylaw that will permit you to park and stay in your vehicle for a maximum of two nights on most roads and in off-road carparks in the City, so long as the vehicle is certified as self-contained and you adhere to all of the relevant transport regulations - but don't worry - if your car, house-truck, campervan or caravan is the only place you have to live in we won't require that it be certified as self-contained and there won't be a time limit. You may stay for as long as you like unless you are causing a nuisance or an obstruction.

9.3 This is akin to Kainga Ora's policy of not evicting difficult tenants from state owned houses and to the Council not effectively enforcing its Noise Control Bylaw. (See New Zealand Herald 14 November – 'Man Fed Up With Anti-social Kainga Ora Neighbour, Sells House And Moves To South Island')

9.4 A bylaw is a regulation made by the Council and once adopted all persons affected (especially in this case the residents living in or near the street or carpark concerned) have the right to expect that it will be enforced without fear or favour and that the Council will, at all times, require compliance with all of its requirements – whatever the financial or other status of the offending party.

9.5 The whole purpose of the by law is to make what is and is not permitted clear and to establish rules with which everyone is required to comply. Selective enforcement in the manner stated by the Council has the potential to cause serious problems – especially in areas like the end of Stanmore Bay Road and Hatfields Beach (accepting of course the requirement there will be compliance with the Reserve Management Plan not with the Bylaw).

9.6 If the Council really intends to enforce the bylaw in the way it says the detailed requirements that are in it now are unnecessary. It would be more correct for it to say:

‘Subject to compliance with the normal road transport requirements anyone can:

- stay overnight (without any restriction about the quality of the vehicle or about ‘for how long’);
- in a car, caravan, house truck or caravan;
- on any road or ‘council owned’ off-road carpark in the City (other than on those roads and off-road parking areas where such parking is expressly prohibited or restricted) so long as they are not causing a nuisance or an obstruction’.

10.0 PARKING UNOCCUPIED CAMPERVANS

Submission

10.1 In some places owners appear to park their unoccupied campervans ‘permanently’ on local roads.

10.2 Should the bylaw address that?

11.0 RESERVE MANAGEMENT PLANS

The proposed bylaw says, all camping is prohibited on reserves unless specifically approved for any particular reserve or reserves in the relevant Reserves Management Plan.

The Council commenced the preparation of Draft Reserve Management Plans for all Hibiscus Coast Reserves in 2017. The first round of public consultation was completed in April 2018 and a draft document issued for public consultation two years later - in July 2020. Submissions closed in September 2020. The Council’s website says the programme envisaged a recommended final plan going to the Local Board for adoption in December 2020. However that hasn’t happened. The submissions hearing didn’t occur until 11 February 2021 and the final plan is still being prepared. It isn’t known when it is likely to be publicly issued. Enquiries to the email address given on the Council’s website (Hibiscus and Bays Local Parks Management Plan – hibiscusandbayslmp@aucklandcouncil.govt.nz) go unanswered.

In our submission in September 2020 we said that the type of information the Council’s various stakeholders could expect to see in every Reserve Management Plan includes:

- What the land title reference is;
- How the land is legally held;
- (Where appropriate) a brief history of the reserve;
- A brief description of what the reserve is, its classification, and how it is used now - including a list of any significant natural assets and of all built assets situated on the reserve now, and where any part of the land or any assets are leased or licensed to a third party a short description of the situation and when the lease(s) and licence(s) expire(s); (and)
- An explanation of what the Council’s future plans for using, enjoying, maintaining, preserving, protecting and developing the reserve are – including the time at which the identified work is intended to be carried out;

The Council’s proposed approach does not do this. As the Council itself says its Draft Hibiscus Coast Local Parks Management Plan is a single high level document that provides a general policy framework. It doesn’t include the current or recommended layout of each reserve or a prioritised action list for reserve development. No-one can obtain from reading it any idea of what the Council’s actual plans for any of its ‘200 plus’ reserves in the Hibiscus Coast are.

This does not meet the requirements of the Reserves Act 1977. The Act requires that there be a Management Plan for every reserve (or for several reserves), that the plan is kept up to date, and that the Council in carrying out its functions comply with it. If it wants to do something other than what the Management Plan provides it cannot do so unless it amends the Management Plan – viz:

‘The administering body of any reserve shall keep its management plan under continuous review.....’

‘The administering body shall in the exercise of its functions comply with the management plan for the reserve and any amendment thereof.....’

This proposed bylaw (that prohibits freedom camping on reserves held under the Reserves Act 1977 unless approved in a Reserve Management Plan) and the recent adverse public reaction to the Council's intention to install bollards at Big Manly Beach (and as a consequence the delay that that has apparently also caused to the proposed installation of bollards at Hatfields Beach) has highlighted again how important it is to have a management plan for every reserve, that clearly states what the Council's future intentions in relation to it are.

Effective and efficient decisions cannot be made in isolation.

- As concerned people have raised, the installation of bollards to control general parking at Manly has wide ranging consequences – not only for the whole beach frontage but also for surrounding streets.

- The installation of bollards to control freedom camping at Hatfields Beach raises all sorts of questions about what the overall development of that whole reserve should be.

- The proposed bylaw stipulates that freedom camping on reserves is prohibited unless approved in a Reserve Management Plan. Such a plan cannot be responsibly prepared unless the effect of allowing such camping (and its potential wider impacts) has been fully thought through – as is clearly illustrated by the situation the Council now needs to deal with at Hatfields. (See Section ‘3’ above)

Submission

11.1 The Reserves Act 1977 requires that there be a Reserve Management Plan for every reserve (or group of reserves) and that every such plan:

- o provide for and ensure the use, enjoyment, maintenance, protection, and preservation, as the case may require, and, to the extent that the Council's resources permit, the development, as appropriate, of the reserve for the purposes for which it is classified; (and
- o that it be kept under continuous review; (and)
- o be fully complied with relating to everything the Council subsequently does concerning the reserve.

This proposed bylaw has highlighted once again the importance of having a Reserve Management Plan that has been prepared via public consultation, in the required manner, for every reserve.

11.2 In my view every Reserve Management Plan should include the information listed in paragraph 2 above.

12.0 THE PROPOSED REQUIRMENT THAT THE PARKING OF FREEDOM CAMPING VEHICLES NOT BE ALLOWED IN THE SAME ROAD OR OFF-ROAD PARKING AREA MORE THAN ONCE IN ANY TWO WEEK PERIOD

The proposed bylaw requires freedom campers to (after two days) depart and not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks. (In the case of the Hammerhead Point land the bylaw requires that the vehicle not return for four weeks.)

Any freedom camper wishing to ‘live’ near a local beach etc will be able to easily circumvent this requirement by simply moving their vehicle every two days to a parking space on another road ‘just around the corner’ - and subject to their compliance with other bylaw and transport regulations local residents and the Council will not be able to do anything about it.

Submission

12.1 That the proposed bylaw be amended to require that freedom campers be required to not return to the same road, off-road carpark, or local area for four weeks (and the term ‘local area’ be defined in the bylaw).

Hibiscus & Bays Local Board area

Prohibited sites

Metro Park (East) 218 Millwater Parkway, Silverdale, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area?

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? In Schedule 1 on pages 10 and 19, under the heading 'Designated Areas Where Freedom Camping Is Prohibited' the proposed bylaw includes a plan of 'Metro Park East, 218 Millwater Parkway, Silverdale'. (Only properties that are not reserves under the Reserves Act 1977 are included in this schedule).

This is inconsistent with the information provided by the Council in its Draft Hibiscus and Bays Local Parks Management Plan (in respect of which the Council sought public submissions in September 2020 and has not yet issued its final Plan). On Page 142 in 'Volume 2 – Hibiscus Coast' of that draft it says that Metro Park East is a 39.9104 Recreation Reserve held under the Reserves Act 1977 with a Local Purpose (Esplanade Reserve) along its boundary with the Orewa Estuary.

Also, the area shown as 'Metro Park East' in the two documents is different.

- In the Council's Draft Local Parks Management Plan all the land on the corner of Millwater Parkway and Arran Drive is a part of Metro Park East;
- In the Draft Bylaw (on page 19) it is excluded – Metro Park East is shown there as finishing opposite Major Henry Greens.

Submission:

3.1 If Metro Park is a reserve held under the Reserves Act 1977 it should not be in Schedule 1 in the By-law.

3.2 If Metro Park is not a reserve held under the Reserves Act 1977 it should not have been included in the Hibiscus and Bays Local Parks Management Plan. (Council has repeatedly said, in response to submissions on that Plan, that land that is not held under the Reserves Act is outside the scope of the Local Parks Management Plan).

3.3 If the land is not held as a reserve pursuant to the Reserves Act 1977 (when it is probably the largest active recreation area in the Hibiscus Coast and has been acquired and developed principally through contributions from developers) can the Council please explain 'how' it is held and 'why' that is the case. (See also 7.0 below)

3.4 That the Council explain the reason for the inconsistency between the plan on page 142 in the Draft Local Parks Management Plan and the plan on page 19 in the Draft Bylaw – both of which maintain that the area shown is what makes up Metro Park East. (See also Section 8 below) . As the proposed bylaw says, all camping is prohibited on reserves unless specifically approved for any particular reserve or reserves in the relevant Reserves Management Plan.

On both sides of the Highway at Hatfields Beach there is a 6.4501 hectare public reserve held under the Reserves Act 1977 – classified as 'Recreation', 'Local Purpose Esplanade', and 'Local Purpose Access'. (See the draft Hibiscus and Bays Draft Local Parks Management Plan – Volume 1 Hibiscus Coast, Page 103).

The Draft Local Parks Management Plan (that closed for public submissions in September last year - 2020) says:

'Under the current Freedom Camping Bylaw 2015 (under review) there is a freedom camping designated site on the west side of the Hibiscus Coast Highway adjacent to the toilet block'

'Unauthorised freedom camping particularly on the waterfront side of Hibiscus Coast Highway adds to congestion and displacement of beach, park and boat ramp users as this is a heavily used area that has limited space for car and trailer parking.

Unauthorised freedom camping also occurs on the grass area to the landward side of Hibiscus Coast Highway, a known contaminated site. Soil disturbance from these unauthorised vehicles may be an issue on the capped contaminated land’.

Hatfields Beach is, and has for a long time now, been a very popular freedom camping spot – but on the beachfront – not on the reserve on the western side of the Highway (near the toilet block). The comments in the Draft Local Parks Management Plan (DLPMP) are wrong. Contrary to what the current Freedom Camping Bylaw is said in the DLPMP to say there is NOT a freedom camping site on the west side of the Hibiscus Coast Highway adjacent to the toilet block. Nor does freedom camping occur at all on the landward side of the reserve. Vehicular access to the reserve on the western side of the highway isn’t practicable – because of either the lie of the land or bollards and a low wooden fence that have been installed to prevent it. Furthermore there is a sign on the fence that says ‘No Camping or Sleeping Overnight’.

There is similar confusion on the beachside. There are no signs there that indicate freedom parking is permitted - to the contrary, only a Rodney District Council sign that says ‘No Camping’. The Council also says (above) that, although that is where it is all occurring, freedom camping on the waterfront is unauthorised.

Another issue is the fact that Waka Kotahi (or Auckland Transport) is currently about half way through the construction of a new pedestrian crossing on the highway opposite the toilet block, a short length of footpath, and two centre islands to slow the traffic. We wonder how well the decision to do that has been coordinated with the Council’s longer term plans for the reserve.

The thirteenth of November 2021 would be a typical ‘out of the main holiday period’ day. At mid-day there were ten campervans or buses parked on the reserve – three on the beachfront at the southern end, six on the beachfront at the northern end, and one on the metalled area by the highway bridge – all very close to the highway carriageway – some dangerously so, only a metre or two from it. (At the northern end the area where campervans can park is only about seven metres deep from the carriageway). On the fourteenth of November, at 11am, there were 11 campervans (or buses) there – four at the northern end and seven at the southern end – plus about 20 cars and a trailer with several kayaks. The whole area is an untidy mess – with so many vehicles in such a confined uncontrolled space parked at all angles - people sitting around them, most of the vehicles old and obviously not self-contained, and the dunes and ground where the vehicles park seemingly not being regularly metalled or otherwise maintained by the Council. Some campervans obviously have another car associated with them and repeated checks indicate at least one car (not associated with a campervan) and two buses appears to be being lived in. So far as the Council’s management is concerned the whole of the seaward side of the road conveys an ‘out of sight- out of mind’ impression.

As a consequence of the Council’s decision not to include the control of freedom camping on reserves in the proposed bylaw it will be very important that the final Local Parks Management Plan state very clearly what the permitted situation at Hatfields Beach is in future to be. If this doesn’t happen (by the time the bylaw comes into force) freedom camping there will no longer be permitted as a result of the repeal of the former bylaw and should that be the case there is certain to be an outcry, much confusion, and for Council Officers a policing nightmare. The attractiveness of Hatfields as a freedom camping site is enhanced because it adjoins the coast, is on the main highway, and there is a public toilet block with a campervan wastewater dump station on the access road beside it.

4.2 In my view freedom camping should be permitted on a properly formed and signposted site on the recreation reserve by the toilet block on the western side of the highway only.

4.3 Campervan parking on the reserve outside the signposted site (including on the foreshore) should be prohibited (and rigidly policed).

4.4 When this bylaw is adopted and the previous one repealed freedom camping at Hatfields Beach will no longer be permitted until the Council authorises it by way of a Reserves Management Plan prepared pursuant to the provisions of the Reserves Act 1977.

4.5 A fair proportion of the freedom camping vehicles that visit Hatfields Beach appear to be not certified self-contained vehicles. When stipulating its proposed future approach for permitting freedom camping there the Council will need to make clear what its stance in relation to vehicles that are not certified as self-contained is.

The proposed bylaw requires that everyone who freedom camps on public land in Auckland that is not a reserve held under the Reserves Act 1977 will, without exception, have to use a certified self-contained vehicle. It is difficult to imagine a situation where the required standard could be less for public reserves than for other public land.

4.6 We also note that the Council is intending to spend $37,000 on installing bollards at Hatfields Beach 'due to complaints from residents about freedom camping, driving, anti-social behaviour and rubbish on the reserve, particularly in summer' (Reference: Hibiscus Matters – 8 November 2021). We question how the Council can do that in the absence of its whole proposed policy approach for the reserve being explained in an adopted Reserve Management Plan that has been prepared via public consultation in the manner required by the Reserves Act 1977. (See also Section 10 below)

4.7 It is important that all issues relating to all reserves' use, enjoyment, maintenance, protection, preservation and development be addressed in a coordinated manner and not individually, in a 'fire fighting' sort of way, when problems arise - that the Council ensure 'whatever is done', 'whenever it is done', always 'fits in' with adopted, regularly updated plans that the Council has for the long term development of every reserve. (See also Section 10). Making provision for, and better managing freedom camping at Hatfields Beach is a major issue.

Which of the proposed restrictions for this area would you want to change at Gulf Harbour Marina?

What do you think is the appropriate maximum number of vehicles allowed at this site?

Other (please specify):

What do you think is the appropriate maximum stay at this site?

Other (please specify):

What do you think is the appropriate departure time at this site?

Other (please specify):

What do you think is the appropriate no-return period at this site?

Other (please specify):

Where do you think the freedom camping parking spaces should be located within this area?

Do you have any other comments you would like to make about this area? One of the areas listed in 'Schedule 2 – Designated Areas Where Freedom Camping Is Restricted' is:

'Gulf Harbour Marina Hammerhead Reserve – 40 Gulf Harbour Drive, Gulf Harbour' (See the Draft Bylaw Page 36).

This is obviously an error. The reserve should not be in Schedule 2 because the bylaw does not apply to freedom camping on reserves that are held under the Reserves Act 1977 – which the Gulf Harbour Marina Hammerhead Reserve is.

But more than this:

- The Gulf Harbour Marina Hammerhead Reserve is not located at 40 Gulf Harbour Drive. That is the address of the Gulf Harbour Recreation Reserve, about a kilometre away opposite the Wentworth College. The Gulf Harbour Marina Hammerhead Reserve is at 1242 Laurie Southwick Parade near the boatramp. (See the Hibiscus and Bays Local Parks Management Plan Page 94).

- But the off-road carparks which the bylaw purports to address under this heading are not on the Gulf Harbour Marina Hammerhead Reserve anyhow. They are located on the land shown on the (incorrectly titled) plan on page 43 in the Draft Bylaw.

We understand that land (that has on it a sealed carpark with about 260 parking spaces, a public toilet block and the Gulf Harbour public boat ramp) is not a reserve – being why it needs to be listed in Schedule 2.

The land is already a permitted freedom camping site pursuant to the provisions of the current bylaw, and has been for many years.

The proposed bylaw says (in Schedule 2) that freehold camping is to (continue to) be permitted there subject to:

- a maximum of ten freedom camping vehicles staying overnight;
- for a maximum of two nights in a four week consecutive period.

Four days ago (14 November 2021) there were fourteen campervans and ten cars parked there – all in an orderly fashion. The way in which the cars were parked indicates that at least eight of them were associated with the campervans. On 17 November (a Wednesday) there were nineteen campervans, nine cars that were obviously associated with them and a large boat. Today (Friday) at 4pm there are twenty-nine campervans and about a dozen cars and two boat trailers associated with them. Three of the campervans are parked elsewhere in the carpark. One – not self contained – has been there for over a week. Already, at this early time (on a week day) potential conflict with boats using the boat ramp is obvious,

The general standard of the freedom camping vehicles at Gulf Harbour is considerably higher than is the situation at Hatfields Beach. Very few wouldn't be self-contained. However, at Hatfields Beach too it seems that at least half the buses and 'vans have cars associated with them. Yesterday (18 November) there were three buses and three vans there with three cars seemingly associated with them.

I question:

- why the Council intends to limit the number of freedom camping vehicles that can park at Gulf Harbour to 10 when an area with 20 parking spaces (in a carpark with a total of more than 280 sealed spaces – 260 plus an additional 20 in the reserve adjacent) is already marked and signposted as being available for freedom camping, and is being used by more than 10 vehicles at a time now; (and)
- why the Council intends to limit parking at Gulf Harbour (in a carpark where there are more than 280 parking spaces) for a maximum of two nights every four weeks when any freedom camping vehicle can, 'as of right', subject to compliance with the normal transport requirements, park in virtually any road, or off-road carpark in the city for a maximum of two nights every two weeks. (See also submission No 11).

Submission:

6.1 That the Council correct the information on pages 36 and 43 of the Draft Bylaw. We suggest the land be referred to as:

'Gulf Harbour Hammerhead Point Carpark', 1346 Laurie Southwick Parade, Gulf Harbour.

6.2 That the Council review the proposed freedom camping restrictions for this land. In fact could not parking be allowed there, subject to the normal conditions, 'as of right'? Does the Gulf Harbour Hammerhead carpark need to be listed in Schedule 2 at all? Maybe it does because of the number visiting there. There is the potential for major conflict with the boat ramp in the summer months.

6.3 That when authorising freedom camping in areas like Gulf Harbour and Hatfields Beach the Council keep in mind the fact that provision needs to be made for parking not only campervans but also the cars that a good proportion of the owners appear to have as well as their 'vans. It is difficult to see campervan owners being prepared to accept anything other than that their cars be allowed to be parked with their 'vans.

6.4 That the parking area that is currently set aside for freedom camping vehicles at Gulf Harbour (20 parking spaces) be enlarged – not reduced to 10 spaces as the bylaw currently provides. If insufficient space is allocated for them the drivers are not going to go away. They will simply park their vehicles in other spaces in the carpark or (quite legally) on one of the local roads as the proposed bylaw allows.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: If vehicles are truly self-contained and occupants are responsible, they will have very little impact on the environment. It is important that they do not prevent day-users parking there too. I think that there needs to be regular checks that vehicles are

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Generally I am very supportive. i do think that the system needs to be 'policed' as otherwise people will flout the rules I also support Councils putting in meters in some carparks where people pay a fee to stay the night (eg carpark next to te Papa does this). This is particularly where facilities are provided such as toilets. A fee eg $10, $20 for 24-hour parking will limit the numbers and prevent popular places being overrun. Overnight parking can be in designated care parks.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Im concerned as to who will monitor this if breaches occur as council takes a while usually 3 to 10 days to deal with any complaints generally,

Im also concerned that it will be allowed at Ferndale house in Mt Albert as it is a reserve and it also borders onto the ferndale Kindy. which could see parents arriving with kids and freedom campers will still be present . This I consider is and could also be a danger with children right there if you have unsavoury people and would not like to see any children snatched etc. Which would be easy to do. Cleo case in aussie is fresh in my mind .

Also the toilet part if they arrive uncontained no one to police that and hate to think what this would be like for this lovely old historic house and land used by many.

Executive Summary

- The proposed bylaws for managing freedom camping in Auckland make good sense
- Not including Reserves among the areas prohibited by the bylaws makes no sense
- There is no indication of how freedom camping in reserves will be funded or managed
- Managing freedom camping sites in Auckland under two different regimes (if reserves are managed at all) is inefficient and will fail
- Including reserves in the bylaw is within Auckland Council's powers and obligations

Introduction to Madill's Farm

Madill's Farm Reserve is a key amenity in the Orakei Ward, providing highly valued recreational opportunities for a wide community. It is one of the larger open spaces and is well maintained by Auckland Council and the Orakei Local Board. It meets the needs for recreation space in the community, attracting many hundreds of residents, sports teams and schools throughout the year.

Diverse environments within Madill's Farm Reserve accommodate a wide range of activities. It includes a stream bordered by many native species. Many walkers, joggers, cyclists, family groups and dog owners enjoy the amenity every day.

Friends of Madill's Farm

Madill Farm - Friends of Madill's Farm has been established for 12 years providing submissions and comment as appropriate to successive Local Boards during their Annual Plan consultation. Friends of Madill's Farm includes residents bordering the Reserve who observe it daily. Friends of Madill's Farm has also lead community engagement in relation to reserve management, security, stream and native bush regeneration, pest control and previously, in 2019, freedom camping.

Members support the Local Board and Auckland Council parks management, by actively undertaking pest control, participating in the Eastern Songbird Project and taking an interest in the ongoing high standards of management and cleanliness that make Madill's Farm Reserve an attractive community amenity. Management of Madill's Farm Reserve

Reserves Act 1977

Madill's Farm Reserve is classified as a Recreation Reserve under s.17 Reserves Act 1977. It is vested in Auckland Council and must be managed in accordance with the purpose and principles of the Reserves Act.

Section 17(2) declares that every recreation reserve shall be so administered [to ensure that]:

(a) the public shall have freedom of entry and access to the reserve, subject to the specific powers conferred on the administering body by sections 53 and 54, to any bylaws under this Act applying to the reserve, and to such conditions and restrictions as the administering body considers to be necessary for the protection and general well-being of the reserve and for the protection and control of the public using it (emphasis added)

(c) those qualities of the reserve which contribute to the pleasantness, harmony and cohesion of the natural environment and to the better use and enjoyment of the reserve shall be conserved.

Section 41(3) provides for Management plans (implemented by Orakei Local Board for Madill's Farm Reserve) which:

shall provide for and ensure the use, enjoyment, maintenance, protection, and preservation, .... of the reserve for the purposes for which it is classified ...."

Most relevantly, for the purposes of considering Freedom Camping, Section 44 "(1) provides: "no person shall use a reserve, or any building, vehicle, boat, caravan, tent, or structure situate thereon, for purposes of permanent or temporary personal accommodation"

Statement of Proposal

Most surprisingly, despite clear legal powers and obligations to manage reserves, the proposed Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2022 excludes land held under the Reserves Act.

As noted in the Statement of Proposal:

"The Freedom Camping Act 2011 complements the rules set out in other legislation, such as the Reserves Act 1977, rather than overriding them. The Reserves Act 1977 prohibits camping on reserves unless the council follows a separate process to allow it.

The council has decided that the new bylaw will not manage freedom camping on land held under the Reserves Act 1977. It will remain prohibited in those areas, unless specific approval is given under that Act."

"The Bylaw will not cover all council-controlled land – freedom camping will be managed on reserves under the Reserves Act 1977, and on regional parks under the Regional Parks Management Plan." What is the Problem?

The likely problem with a policy that freedom camping will be managed on reserves under the Reserves Act 1977 is that reserves have never been adequately managed under that Act. The issue is almost certain to be exacerbated. Once Auckland Council has established and funded resources and processes to manage freedom camping on other council-controlled sites, reserves will fall further out of consideration and/or management of them will not be resourced.

There is no indication of any resources being made available to do anything to manage and monitor the prohibition of freedom camping in reserves despite a clear prohibition and a requirement on the Council to do so. This raises the obvious question of what and how it will be done, by whom and with what consequences. The loose statement that "freedom camping will be managed on reserves under the Reserves Act" contrasts with the specific resources and powers in the bylaw. For example, will Council parks staff becoming aware of freedom camping be authorised to require campers to move or to fine them and if so, how much? What signage is to be provided in reserves? Are reserves to be monitored by anyone? Who if anyone, should residents contact to report freedom camping on a reserve rather than other council-controlled land?

There is no apparent logic to this policy; the reverse is true. Reserves are some of our most precious assets in Auckland, contributing to its attractiveness and our outdoor lifestyle. Reserves by their very nature tend to be in or contain areas of native bush – highly attractive locations for freedom camping particularly if not readily visible from public roads and paths. These are some of the most important areas to be controlled and monitored.

Madill's Farm is a clear example. Easy road access to a substantial car parking area that backs on to a natural stream with established native plants along its banks. Also adjacent to residential housing in a natural amphitheatre, noise carries far at night and there is no control to address duration of stay or cleaning of the area before departure.

What is the Solution?

Unusually, the obvious solution is very simple. Add reserves to the new bylaw. The Council's power to make the relevant bylaws is clear in section 17(2) (a) Reserves Act and its obligations to take suitable action are clear in sections 17(2) (c), section 41(3) and section 44(1) Reserves Act.

It makes far more sense and is much more efficient and effective to manage freedom camping in Auckland under one system.

The Minister of Tourism and MBIE on 30 November 2021 announced that in 2022 the Freedom Camping Act 2011 will be subject to changes that “seek to improve the sustainability of freedom camping in New Zealand, protect the natural environment and local communities' enjoyment of it, and support efforts to ensure that all freedom camping is done responsibly”.

It would be doubly wasteful for Auckland Council to have to go through a separate process to bring reserves under the same regime as other council-controlled land when both logic and the clear message from central Government is that this is an aspect of tourism management and community value that warrants a comprehensive solution.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

- Our objection relates to the proposal that part of the Rainbow's End Reserve (Reserve) be designated as a "Restricted Area" where freedom camping by two "certified self-contained vehicles" would be permitted. The area of the Reserve that is proposed for freedom camping purposes is wholly inappropriate for that purpose (even if restricted); and we urge that the proposed designation be removed from any by-law passed by the Auckland Council.
- We own the house and property at, Rainbow's End; we have owned this property for nearly twenty years. We are the closest residents to the part of the Reserve that is proposed for freedom camping. As such: (1) we are long-term, regular and very close observers of the Reserve; and (2) as our property is the closest to and would be most affected by the proposed designation, we immediately declare our self-interest in that regard.
- The maps outlining the proposal are ambiguous, showing "areas where designated site could be located". More than half the Reserve area shown on the relevant map is seashore, much of it in mangroves. It would be impossible to park a vehicle in that area – even to access it. We understand that is not the intention; and therefore urge that the ambiguity should be removed (but, that removal should not be taken as an indication that we would then support the proposal).
- At the consultation in the Warkworth Masonic Hall on Saturday 16 February, 2019, it was explained to us that the sealed area (Sealed Area) immediately adjacent to the boat ramp is the only area where freedom camping vehicles would be permitted in the Reserve. For the reasons stated below, even that Sealed Area is entirely unsuitable for freedom camping.
- The Sealed Area is small (approximately 8 m x 21 m) and is immediately adjacent to the boat ramp (upgraded by the Council about six years ago). The Sealed Area was built to provide a turning area for vehicles that are launching boats on the ramp or making a u-turn to go back to the main road. Even one parked campervan on the Sealed Area would obstruct such manoeuvring. On the other (North Eastern) side of the road from the Sealed Area there is an open drain, feeding into a closed drain (see photo). This already restricts manoeuvrability on the road and Sealed Area. Also, vehicles trying to make a U-Turn, have on several occasions "fallen into" the open drain (which is much deeper than it appears), requiring local or AA assistance.

- The Sealed Area is only lightly sealed (essentially, one thin layer) and is already being broken up by vehicle movements (see photo). Camper vans are heavy (particularly when loaded with water), and will only exacerbate this damage.
- The unsealed/vegetation area of the Reserve has a high-water table. It is prone to flooding (particularly at high or spring tides), and is damp and boggy for more than half the year. On some occasions, the tide is so high that it covers the lower part of Martin Road. Vehicles seeking to manoeuvre outside the Sealed Area are regularly “bogged down”, requiring help and gouging deeply into the grassed area of the Reserve. This causes considerable damage to the grassed area (see photo).
- The Reserve is an area of high conservation and environmental sensitivity; and is becoming increasingly so. In that respect, the Reserve differs markedly from many of the other sites proposed for freedom camping. Since the boat marina was built at Sandspit, several native bird species have migrated across the river to the Reserve, particularly Pied Oystercatchers which are now using the Reserve for feeding, nesting and breeding, mostly in areas that are close to the area proposed for freedom camping. We have observed upwards of twenty of these birds in the Reserve (see photo); they are particularly protective of their nesting areas, and react adversely to any human approach. A number of other bird species also frequent the reserve; notably Shags, Herons, New Zealand pigeons (Keruru), Tui and Kingfisher. Most of these species are protected. The area is noted for its birdlife; and local residents are careful not to interfere with this.
- We’ve had past problems with unofficial freedom campers; particularly in vehicles that aren’t self-contained. They frequently use the area as an open toilet, including defecating in full public view, usually just below the high-water mark. We realise that the proposal contemplates “certified self-contained vehicles”; but, from our past experience, we firmly believe that this won’t be observed and can’t be adequately policed.
- Overall, we have considerable reservations about the manner in which this bylaw can and will be enforced. The enforcement “regime” outlined by the Council is very benign (counselling, warnings, etc, most of it after the event complained of, and after offenders have moved on to another camping site). Experienced freedom campers will know how to exploit this to the full – moving on to another site (perhaps in a different Council area) before there can be any meaningful enforcement. Most complaints (e.g., about vehicles in excess of the permitted number) will arise late in the day (after vehicles have settled for the night – it won’t be immediately obvious that they intend to stay the night), and we seriously doubt that the Council can and will provide the after-hours resources to follow up on these complaints and to provide the necessary, real-time enforcement on the ground. Even if they have been habitual offenders while in the country, freedom campers from overseas will be able to avoid any attempt to enforce monetary penalties (fines, etc), simply by leaving the country. ## Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Piha - I understand you are the person to talk to about the proposed freedom camping changes planned for Piha.

I would like to register my vote of NO freedom camping anywhere at Piha please.

We have a camp ground with facilities that are perfect for catering to campers.

I could list many reasons to ban the practice of freedom camping however will focus on these 3.

1/ Toilets in self contained campers are never used or if they are its very very few times, No one uses them for number toos. The campers just go in the bush, dunes, on the side of the road or they go to the camp ground and use theirs (Without paying) etc etc.

2/ They leave Rubbish.

3/ Parking... there is not enough parking as it is let alone letting people camp there for days.

Happy to have campers... at the camping ground.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Piha - This is my submission on the draft Freedom Camping Bylaw for the Auckland region.

I am opposed to Piha (and wider area) being opened up for freedom camping along beachfront and roadsides, in particular the following West Coast areas:

- Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road, local park
- Marine Parade North, carparks on beachfront
- Marine Parade South, carparks on beachfront
- Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road
- Karekare Road, Parking area at beach (partly road reserve)
- Anawhata Road, entrance to Rose Track and White Track
- Anawhata Road, northern end, end of road parking area
- Te Henga Bethells Road, northern end carpark at beach
- Bethells Road, entrance to Lake Wainamu Track
- French Bay, French Bay carparks
- Little Huia, Huia Road

Regarding Piha specifically:

There is already a beautiful campground in Piha that camper vans can park at.

-If you feel that camping should be cheaper, can the council not subsidise entry rates?

-Campervans are already able to park at the end of Log Race road for $10/night

Freedom camping brings unhygienic waste into Piha.

-Many locals, myself included have experienced finding human excrement, toilet paper and condoms in the dunes in front of the park when there is camping allowed

-It is said that a van must be fully contained (with toilet) to freedom camp however we have experienced that this does not mean it gets used.

-At a time when we are dealing with a pandemic, having to deal also with human waste in public areas is embarrassingly poor judgement on part of the council.

-As you can see, the Christchurch council has acknowledged this is a real issue;

Freedom campers cause damage to surrounding trees

-I've witnessed canopies being strung up from branches for shade shelters

-I've witnessed branches being snapped off to allow campers underneath.

Freedom campers brings more activity onto the beach at night times

-this causes disturbances to endangered/native birds

-this increases risks of fires/fireworks

-this brings more off-track traffic through sand dunes which breaks up the grasses establishing in the dunes - which are part of an ecosystem. Piha is a regional park which is home to many endangered species. It is well established that humans are the biggest threat to these and adding night time campers to an already busy daytime beach shows a complete lack of respect for this precious taonga.

The Piha beachfront is already at capacity during weekends for parking.

-adding more congestion to this is not fair on day trippers and not fair on locals who have to witness cars idling looking for parks and filling the air with noise and fumes.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Piha - I am writing to oppose the proposal of freedom camping in Piha.

Reasons for this is we have a wonderful campground that is very accomodating.

Our streets are narrow already and on a beautiful day it's hard enough to get parks.

There are no safe footpaths for increase in pedestrians.

Litter is already a problem and this will only make it worse.

Council have much other more important issues to be dealing with including fixing the Road to Piha properly, not just bandaids. Maintaining the footpaths and a skatepark for the kids.

Please consider the points above. I strongly believe freedom camping has no benefits to the Piha community.

and there are no toilets at north

We really need toilets at the far car park at north Piha

I'm also concerned about the parking as we don't have enough as it is

And the campers on the road as in a few parts we need to cross the centre line because of a slip or broken off bit just below Pendrell Rd and the one on the main road to town.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

Kiwi Esplanade Mangere Bridge - As a resident and owner of a property near the ambury farm end of Kiwi Esplanade I was concerned to hear that there is a proposal to introduce freedom camping along Kiwi Esplanade.

Can the local board ask for freedom camping to be prohibited along Kiwi Esplanade in Mangere Bridge and especially to prohibit freedom camping for the section from Seaforth road along Kiwi Esplanade to the Farm so our birds remain protected? Can you advise please – I think this matter is urgent given consultations close on 5 December.

We have a camping ground in Ambury Farm which offers very reasonably priced camping. I see on a daily basis the council van picking up rubbish left behind and this will surely increase with freedom campers. We have a number of camping vans parked up already and staying for extended periods over the summer months. With increased housing in the area the use of the foreshore for recreational purposes is increasing and parking outside my property is often at a premium.

I would ask that the proposed freedom camping is strongly rejected for this area.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Awhitu Peninsula - I'm commenting on Freedom Camping with specific reference to the Awhitu Peninsula. Several of our small coastal reserves allow camping, which has mostly been beneficial - areas kept tidy; rubbish in bins; less out of control parties, vehicle mayhem, tables destroyed for bonfires - etc. However, it is increasingly noticeable that people are settling in for the long haul, with several overwintering... clearly these are people with nowhere else to go... cold showers, trekking to the loos in winter rain... not likely by choice? (None of the reserves have signage indicating the rules for camping...). Here's the problem with people setting up permanent dwelling places - they take over territory which is no longer available for locals or visitors for picnicking, walking, dog walking, family cricket - etc (noting that our reserves are typically SMALL)... I have not notified our Council / Reserves teams through winter, having a cosy house to return to... but, now that summer is here, and our reserves have more visitors requiring recreational space, should council reserves be regularly patrolled by authorised people who can tactfully point out the rules, and the reasons for them; giving the "overstayers" a timeframe to move on, and mapping of other reserves, so that they have places to go to?

I wanted to pass on my experience of freedom camping in Stanmore Bay over the past couple of years.

I have found that there are progressively more people that are long term freedom camping around this area.

They had a large amount of the main carpark for quite a long time including busses, boats, trailers, cars, vans but seemed like they were moved on a few months back from this section when they had major road works done in the carpark.

They certainly moved in and were using alot of the carparks permanently when other members of the public wanted to use them on the weekends as it is a space for a boat ramp and local sports clubs.

It was very obvious they were there for many months and council were not moving them on.

Now some of them are in the very small carpark at the end of Stanmore Bay road next to the toilets.

There is a beaten up van that has been lived in there for months and months.

There are cars and vans that are there constantly and have the ever present smell of weed around. My 12 year old son has to walk past twice a day to go to school and my 10 year old daughter will be starting intermediate next year will also be walking past twice a day. I am greatly concerned that they present a danger to my children with their anti social behaviour that comes along with them getting drunk and stoned.

Stanmore Bay - They have obviously moved into Stanmore Bay and the council will not move them.

The council have been contacted but have said there is nothing they can do to move them at the moment.

These new freedom camping bylaws need to be able to stop people from just sleeping rough in their cars for weeks/months.

#1537

They are antil social and make me more and more concerned for the safety of my children.

Freedom camping that only stays a night or two in self contained vehicles would be fine but not people who are just rough sleeping for free at the local beach.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Piha - I am writing to add my request to PLEASE protect Piha from the planned free-for-all. We have not yet reached the height of summer but already the congestion and difficulty with parking is reaching what would be akin to mid summer holidays. Our current infrastructure cannot cope with masses more vehicles. It makes it unsafe for everyone residing out here, especially our older and younger populations.

We have a beautiful and very under-utilised campground that desperately needs the support and business, now more than ever in these covid times. Why not direct would be freedom campers there instead of the roadside??

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Mangere Bridge - I am concerned about the impact of freedom camping on Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Road in Māngere Bridge, both of which lead to Ambury Regional Farm Park and are actively used by our walking group.

These two environmentally sensitive areas need protection from freedom camping through a prohibition and compliance/policing. Freedom camping (even short stays) raise the following concerns:

- Disruption to bird roosting areas: I am very concerned about the impact of freedom camping on migratory bird roosting areas along Kiwi Esplanade. This area is known internationally as a destination for migratory birds including South Island pied oystercatchers, pied stilts, wrybills, Godwits, and others. Migratory birds rely on the grassed areas of the Kiwi Esplanade foreshore reserve (especially from 64 Kiwi Esplanade along to the end of the Esplanade where it joins the Farm. But these special birds also use the pahoehoe lava along the entire Esplanade to roost.

- During roosting season it is crucial that these beautiful birds are left in peace to recover from or prepare for their long journeys. Some visitors already run or drive mini motorbikes illegally through the roosting flocks causing distress and making them take flight. Long term protection of roosting areas is crucial to the health and wellbeing of our birdlife and it is vital that this area be excluded from Freedom Campers.

I- increased litter: People come, park up, stay for short or long periods and sometimes overnight in cars or vans that are not self-contained, then drive away leaving their rubbish where they stopped.

- Noise problems along the Esplanade and Ambury Road: In the past there have been significant noise problems in these areas. Freedom camping adds another dimension to an ongoing issue that flares from time to time.

- Retaining views/view shafts: Views of the harbour will be obstructed by freedom camping vehicles. The consultation document accepts that protecting views is a reasonable consideration.

- Increased use and pressure – More people are using Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Farm areas for recreation (especially due to lockdown and increasing housing density). There is enough pressure on these areas for parking without adding more pressure from freedom camping vehicles.

- Compliance and Policing: I understand there is no additional funding planned for compliance and policing of the new bylaws, so how will problems be addressed. Just because a bylaw requires vehicles to be self-contained doesn't mean freedom campers will follow the rules. Noise control and the police are already under pressure.

- Ambury Farm has a proper camping ground and its use ought to be encouraged, rather than allowing freedom camping in a special natural environment that needs protection.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Piha - I am writing to express my concern over freedom camping at Piha being allowed! Free camping will destroy Piha. Lines of campers parked up overnight on the road is not at all what Piha is about . It will absolutely detract from the beauty of the place.

We have a camping ground here at Piha which is perfectly equipped for camping - a small business run by hard working people - a camping ground is a rare thing in auckland which campers should be supporting.

It has services/toilets/facilities to provide for campers in an efficient, environmentally friendly way.

I am a local at Piha and often come across campers staying overnight on the side of the road - on my morning runs - and have witnessed, so many times, the waste and rubbish in the bushes - toilet paper stuffed into the grass. Not to mention human faeces that my dog is good at sniffing out.

These campers do not need to be here when there is a CAMPING GROUND around the corner - with Toilets to put toilet paper in and showers.

There is also limited parking at Piha on summer days and to be already filled up with campers will make the situation worse.

People travelling around the country and enjoying the beauty of our landscape can camp in places created for that purpose. Piha is NOT remote, it is too close to auckland city to allow for freedom camping - it will be inundated with campers taking the free route when they could otherwise be supporting a local business and keeping the roadsides clean and free for everyone to enjoy during the day.

Please do not allow freedom camping in Piha.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Mangere Bridge - I am writing to seek a PROHIBITION ON FREEDOM CAMPING IN THE FOLLOWING LOCATIONS IN MĀNGERE BRIDGE:

- The full length of Kiwi Esplanade (including all parking areas and the entrance to Ambury Farm at the western end) and the length of Ambury Road (most of which hugs the farm and at the western end provides access to the main entrance of Ambury Regional Park).
- The entrance to Māngere Mountain and surrounding high traffic areas (including the Maunga parking areas, Domain Lane, and parking areas near the Maunga Skate Park, Memorial Hall, Plunket rooms, Tennis Club, Bowling Club, Scout Hall, and Māngere Bridge School.)

These key locations in Māngere Bridge need protection from freedom camping through prohibition and compliance/policing. These areas are already used inappropriately for freedom camping with significant detrimental effects. Given our community's proximity to the airport, our community could become a key destination point for freedom camping, which raises the following concerns:

- Disruption to bird roosting areas (Kiwi Esplanade): I am most concerned about the impact of freedom camping on migratory bird roosting areas along Kiwi Esplanade. This area is known internationally as a destination for migratory birds including South Island pied oystercatchers, pied stilts, wrybills, Godwits, and others. Our migratory birds rely on the grassed areas of the Kiwi Esplanade foreshore reserve (especially from 64 Kiwi Esplanade along to the end of the Esplanade where it joins the Farm. But these special birds also use the pahoehoe lava along the entire Esplanade to roost. During roosting season it is crucial that these beautiful birds are left in peace to recover from or prepare for their long journeys. Many residents are already aware of these roosting areas and are very respectful towards our birdlife. But some visitors are not and run or drive mini motorbikes illegally through the roosting flocks causing distress and making them take flight. We are already planning to take further action to work with Council to create better signage along Kiwi Esplanade to educate the public using this area for recreation. But long term protection of roosting areas is crucial to the health and wellbeing of our birdlife and it is vital that this area be excluded from Freedom Campers.
- Improper use of Ambury Farm facilities (Ambury Road/Kiwi Esplanade): Freedom Campers already use these areas – at times for extended periods - and do so using vehicles (cars and vans and tents) that are not self-contained.

They use the ablutions block at the Farm without permission or payment. The Farm has locked gates overnight but can be accessed by foot. The ablutions blocks are open at night for users of the Ambury Farm campground.

- High traffic areas around the Maunga, halls and clubs: These locations/facilities carry a lot of traffic and host numerous recreational and sporting activities mainly for local residents but also visitors. It is an area known for a history of undesirable behaviour and those problems continue to flare up. There are no public toilet facilities in that area.
- Increased litter (all named areas): We already routinely host pop-up rubbish collection working bees to deal with rubbish dropped by people using these areas. People come, park up, stay for short or long periods and some overnight in cars or vans that are not self-contained, then drive away leaving their rubbish where they stopped. We are concerned litter could increase. Rubbish bins are scarce (in an attempt to encourage people to take their litter home with them).
- Noise problems (all named areas): In the past there have been significant noise problems in these areas. Along the Esplanade especially our Local Board has exercised leadership in working with the Police, residents, Māngere Bridge Residents and Ratepayers, and Council Officers to deal with disruptive behaviour that caused major stress to and sleep deprivation of residents. Freedom camping adds another dimension to an ongoing issue that flares from time to time.
- Retaining views/view shafts (all named areas): Some residents are concerned their views of the harbour, mountain and farm will be obstructed by freedom camping vehicles. There are many surprising view shafts in Māngere Bridge given the contour of the land. The consultation document accepts that protecting views is a reasonable consideration.
- Increased use and pressure (all named areas) – More local residents and whānau from neighbouring communities are using Kiwi Esplanade, Ambury Farm and the Maunga for recreation (due to prolonged pandemic lockdowns and increasing housing density, here and in neighbouring communities). It is a pleasure to see families enjoy our beautiful place. There is work to be done however to prevent littering and keep noise levels at reasonable levels, and ensure appropriate behaviour around birdlife and other users. We think there is enough pressure on these named high traffic areas for parking without adding more pressure from overnight freedom camping vehicles.
- Compliance and Policing (all named areas): We understand there is no additional funding planned for compliance and policing of the new bylaws, which will put the burden on locals and inevitably the Local Board to address.

A wholesale right to freedom camping in Māngere Bridge (even within limits) makes no sense when Ambury Regional Farm Park has an affordable, accessible, well-run camping site that can accommodate self-contained camping vans and provides facilities for others. This camp ground is well away from local residents and does not cause disruption to anyone. Farm Rangers ensure compliance and campground rules keep everyone safe. We ought to be encouraging proper use of this locally approved campground and its facilities, but also ensure these facilities are not exploited, which inevitably creates more work for Ambury Farm Rangers.

Additionally, the residential streets of Auckland are not the right place for camping and living in a vehicle. Other cities like Tauranga and Gisborne have significantly stronger protections in place for residential streets and Auckland Council should review and consider these protections for Auckland. For example: Tauranga states not in front of houses or businesses, and Gisborne has closed its urban boundary to camping in a vehicle unless in designated freedom camping sites. Both cities have this under their Freedom Camping Bylaws, made under the Freedom Camping Act.

Finally I wish to raise a concern about the consultation process. This process is happening at a time when everyone is exhausted from an extended period of lockdown due to COVID and many people are unaware of a pending bylaw change. Ordinarily on an issue of this importance – which has significant environmental and social impacts – our local community groups would actively engage with our Residents and Ratepayers Group, alert the wider community through our networks and community newsletter, have a public meeting and seek signatures to a submission. But I presenting this submission on the day the consultation process ends without having had the opportunity to lead such engagement work. For that reason I ask especially that the matters raised above are taken into serious consideration because as a long-time resident and active community volunteer I strongly believe the matters raised here would gain broad support in our community if people were aware of the consultation and the issue.

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Mangere Bridge - I am concerned about the impact of freedom camping on Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Road in Māngere Bridge, both of which lead to Ambury Regional Farm Park and are actively used by our walking group.

These two environmentally sensitive areas need protection from freedom camping through a prohibition and compliance/policing. Freedom camping (even short stays) raise the following concerns:

- Disruption to bird roosting areas: I am very concerned about the impact of freedom camping on migratory bird roosting areas along Kiwi Esplanade. - Noise problems along the Esplanade and Ambury Road: In the past there have been significant noise problems in these areas. Freedom camping adds another dimension to an ongoing issue that flares from time to time.
- Retaining views/view shafts: Views of the harbour will be obstructed by freedom camping vehicles. The consultation document accepts that protecting views is a reasonable consideration.
- Increased use and pressure – More people are using Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Farm areas for recreation (especially due to lockdown and increasing housing density). There is enough pressure on these areas for parking without adding more pressure from freedom camping vehicles.

- Compliance and Policing: I understand there is no additional funding planned for compliance and policing of the new bylaws, so how will problems be addressed. Just because a bylaw requires vehicles to be self-contained doesn't mean freedom campers will follow the rules. Noise control and the police are already under pressure.

Ambury Farm has a proper camping ground and its use ought to be encouraged, rather than allowing freedom camping in a special natural environment that needs protection.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Arundel Reserve - I live on the edge of Arundel Reserve at the northern end of Orewa beach. I am an owner occupier. I pay hefty body corporate fees as well as my mortgage and rates for the privilege. Last summer we caught freedom campers and homeless people jumping the fence of our complex so they could help themselves to our foreshore swimming pool and spa. This was mostly during the small hours of the morning. Our body corporate will always call the police and have offenders prosecuted as we are sick and tired of people thinking they can help themselves to a free wash and soak. Dirty towels, discarded bathing costumes, broken bottles and rubbish used to be common calling card before we installed a wireless security camera system and now catch them in the act. I fully understand why residents in high value areas make freedom campers feel unwelcome. Arundel Reserve is small, has limited parking spaces and small toilet facilities. Its close proximity to the beach and large shade trees means it is popular as a family picnic site. Residents and beach goers do not want to see our area become another Hatfields Beach where freedom campers made that area intolerable during the lockdown in 2020 due to the untidy and filthy state the area was left in. A surplus of campervans parked at our reserve most nights over the summer is not a lifestyle choice we welcome.

We think the local council should look at establishing a dedicated freedom camping area on the edge of Orewa township. there is plenty of space just off the motorway bypass or near the estuaries. Provide the area with good signage, parking bays, toilets, water, and rubbish disposal. Then provide access to walkways/cycleways or public transport to bring the campers to the beach front and township for the day. This was a model that was introduced in other popular tourist destinations like Wanaka where freedom campers were creating problems at the lake front reserves. It was a happy and successful compromise

Better management by council is the best outcome for all parties affected by this issue.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - I wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the road reserves in the Piha, Karekare and Anawhata areas, that is, all roads from the intersection of Piha Road with Scenic Drive.

My reasons for this are:

1. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety.
2. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes and native vegetation.
3. Freedom camping in road reserves within forest could spread kauri dieback.
4. Freedom camping at beachfronts and entrances to tracks and beaches will block access for day visitors.
5. The West Coast and parkland is already at capacity from people from Auckland and further afield, with overflowing rubbish bins, parking blocking driveways and carparks full often from before midday.
6. The area cannot accommodate more visitors especially as the bylaw allows parking for days on end.
7. There are already issues with access for emergency vehicles such as fire trucks being blocked by vehicles, and freedom camping will make this worse.
8. There is provision for camping by campervans within regional parks and at the Piha campground so it is not necessary to provide further sites.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Mangere Bridge - I am writing to provide feedback regarding the proposed Freedom Camping Bylaw and specifically to prohibition on Freedom Camping along the full length of Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Road.

Due to their proximity to Auckland airport and the camping van pick up and drop off hubs, combined with the attractiveness of harbourside and Regional Farm, these roads require protection from inundation of freedom camper vans. They would be very likely to become a renowned destination freedom camping site. Should they be permitted there will be detrimental impacts on the sensitive environment and the enjoyment and health of the public who use the reserve and the farm.

My concerns are:

- Disruption to bird roosting areas : The foreshore reserve is internationally known as a destination for migratory birds including South Island pied oystercatchers, pied stilts, wrybills and Godwits. They use the pahoehoe lava along the Esplanade to roost and especially the grassed areas. It is critical that these birds are not distressed as they recover from or prepare for their long journeys. Protection of roosting areas is crucial to the health and wellbeing of our birdlife.
- Increased litter: Rubbish dropped by the public is already a problem along the reserve. After a sunny weekend, bins are overflowing already. We already have community rubbish collection working bees to deal with rubbish dropped by people using these areas. People come, park up, stay for short or long periods and some overnight in cars or vans that are not self-contained, then drive away leaving their rubbish where they stopped. There have also been many observed instances of these people using the reserve as a toilet and emptying their toileting cassettes straight into the Manukau Harbour. Litter would increase dramatically if these was allowed to become a freedom camping destination and there is also a health and safety risk to the public that enjoy the reserve and the waterside.
- Noise problems : In the past there have been significant noise problems along Kiwi Esplanade. The Local Board has exercised leadership in working with the Police, residents, Māngere Bridge Residents and Ratepayers, and Council Officers to deal with this unruly and antisocial behaviour. Freedom camping would add probability of re-igniting this.
- Loss of views/view shafts: Views of the harbour, mountain and farm will be obstructed by freedom camping vehicles for many residents. The consultation document accepts that protecting views is a reasonable consideration.

- Increased Pressure on all resources that public use. Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Farm are enjoyed by many of the public of South Auckland for recreation. It is one of the jewels of South Auckland and is becoming popular due to increased housing density in Mangere and neighbouring communities + has been discovered by many during the Covid-19 lockdowns. There is already pressure on toilets, rubbish bins and parking, without adding overnight camping vans.

It is ridiculous to allow Freedom Camping along Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Road when there is a Council run campsite at Ambury Farm Park. This camping ground is affordable, accessible and has appropriate facilities and rules to ensure there is no environmental impact and no disruption to the public enjoyment of the area.

While I appreciate there would be general rules in place to minimise long stays and semi permanent residency by freedom campers, if there is no additional money for ensuring policing and compliance by Auckland Council, it will fall to the local residents and the Local Board to address those who do not stay by the rules.

I am most concerned that one of the most environmentally sensitive, beautiful and much enjoyed areas of South Auckland will be detrimentally impacted unless it is prohibited to freedom campers and they are encouraged to use the Council owned campsite and Ambury Farm instead. So much has been done by both the Council and the Local Board over the 2 decades to enhance the Manukau Harbour, Kiwi Esplanade Reserve and Ambury Farm, it would be devastating to see it undone due to lack of foresight regarding the full impact of permitting freedom campers to save a few dollars rather than using the campsite so close by.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

We wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the road reserves in the Te Henga/Bethells area, including the Lake Wainamu Carpark, Te Henga Walkway Carpark and Bethells Beach Carpark.

- There are just not enough parking spaces in the Wainamu Lake carpark or the Te Henga Walkway carpark. On most days, these carparks are at capacity, with vehicles (from day trippers) parking along Bethells Road, including where yellow lines and "No Parking" signs exist. This has the effect of reducing traffic flow to one lane only in many places. Unfortunately, enforcement of the parking regulations is not policed regularly or at appropriate times, so this is an on-going problem — especially as it can very much hamper any emergency/fire/ambulance vehicles trying to access the beach to save people's lives — and many rescues are performed every year at the beach. Allowing large leisure vehicles (and these can include trucks and buses that have been converted to be self-contained, as well as huge fifth-wheelers) will only turn a major headache into an impossible nightmare.
- Bethells and Te Henga Roads are among the most dangerous, narrow roads in New Zealand, and do not lend themselves to larger vehicles and/or large trailers or caravans, as many of the corners are very tight and necessitate crossing over the centre lines to negotiate them.
- We are not against freedom camping in appropriate areas, per se (we are financial members of NZMCA). However, "appropriate" is the operative word. And Bethells Beach, Lake Wainamu carpark, and the Te Henga carpark are, most definitely, NOT APPROPRIATE! There is already huge environmental and ecological pressure on this sensitive area of the Waitakere Ranges, which is increasing at a rapid pace due to the unprecedented residential development of surrounding west Auckland.

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Mangere Bridge - I request that the following Māngere Bridge areas are added to the prohibited area list for Freedom Camping:

- Kiwi Esplanade (east to west)
- the roads surrounding Ambury Farm
- The roads surrounding Maunga Māngere (Māngere Mountain and Domain)
- The northern end of Coronation Road and Waterfront Road

Due to close proximity to Auckland airport and campervan pick-up/drop-off hubs, combined with the attractiveness of the Manukau harbour-side and Regional Farm, these roads are likely to become high volume freedom camper areas, and a renowned destination freedom camping site. Should they be permitted, the high volume of freedom campers will heavily impact the sensitive natural environment and the enjoyment and health of the public who use the reserve and the farm.

Rationale for adding these areas to the prohibited area list:

1. Disruption to bird roosting areas: The foreshore reserve is internationally known as a destination for migratory birds including South Island pied oystercatchers, pied stilts, wrybills and Godwits. They use the pahoehoe lava along the Esplanade to roost and especially the grassed areas. It is critical that these birds are not distressed as they recover from or prepare for their long journeys. Protection of roosting areas is crucial to the health and wellbeing of our birdlife.

2. Risk to delicate mangroves right along the foreshore of Manukau Harbour: The trash and sewerage from self contained toilets, or freedom campers just pooing in the bushes, would risk the delicate mangrove ecosystem. Even already today, there have also been many observed instances of people using the reserve as a toilet and emptying their toileting cassettes straight into the Manukau Harbour.

3. Increased litter: Rubbish dropped by the public is already a problem along the reserve. After a sunny weekend, bins are overflowing already. We already have community rubbish collection working bees to deal with rubbish dropped by people using these areas. People come, park up, stay for short or long periods and some overnight in cars or vans that are not self-contained, then drive away leaving their rubbish where they stopped. Litter would increase dramatically if these was allowed to become a freedom camping destination and there is also a health and safety risk to the public that enjoy the reserve and the waterside.

4. Noise problems: In the past there have been significant noise problems along Kiwi Esplanade. The Local Board has exercised leadership in working with the Police, residents, Māngere Bridge Residents and Ratepayers, and Council Officers to deal with this unruly and antisocial behaviour. Freedom camping would add probability of re-igniting this.

5. Risks shutting out local families from the area: The local reserves, pedestrian bridge, fishing areas and Ambury farm should be places for local families and people to enjoy, without the congestion and lack of parking driven by volumes of campervans and freedom campers.

6. There is no supporting infrastructure for campers to dump their trash, empty their toilets or dispose of grey water. Risk that it gets dumped into the delicate natural environment of Manukau Harbour.

7. Loss of views/view shafts: Views of the harbour, mountain and farm will be obstructed by freedom camping vehicles for many residents. The consultation document accepts that protecting views is a reasonable consideration.

8. Increased Pressure on all resources that public use. Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Farm are enjoyed by many of the public of South Auckland for recreation. It is one of the jewels of South Auckland and is becoming popular due to increased housing density in Māngere and neighbouring communities + has been discovered by many during the Covid-19 lockdowns. There is already pressure on toilets, rubbish bins and parking, without adding overnight camping vans.

Furthermore, it makes little sense to allow freedom camping in the Māngere Bridge area when there is already a Council run camping ground at Ambury Farm Park. This camping ground is affordable, accessible and has appropriate facilities and rules to ensure there is no environmental impact and no disruption to the public enjoyment of the area.

While I appreciate there would be general rules in place to minimise long stays and semi-permanent residency by freedom campers, if there is no additional money for ensuring policing and compliance by Auckland Council, it will fall to the local residents and the Local Board to address those who do not stay by the rules.

I am most concerned that one of the most environmentally sensitive, beautiful and much enjoyed areas of South Auckland will be detrimentally impacted unless it is prohibited to freedom campers. So much has been done by both the Council and the Local Board over the last 20 years to enhance the Manukau Harbour, Kiwi Esplanade Reserve and Ambury Farm, it would be devastating to see it undone due to lack of foresight regarding the full impact of permitting freedom campers.

I request that we explicitly prohibit freedom camping in these Mangere Bridge areas, and encourage our visitors to use the Council owned campsite and Ambury Farm instead. This is a special area and an asset to New Zealand. Let's look after it for generations to come.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Piha - This is an email submission to say that I do not support Piha being opened up for freedom camping along beachfront and roadsides for the following reasons:

1. There is already a beautiful campground in Piha that camper vans can park at.

-If you feel that camping should be cheaper, can the council not subsidise entry rates?

-Campervans are already able to park at the end of Log Race road for $10/night

2.Freedom camping brings unhygienic waste into Piha.

-Many locals, myself included have experienced finding human excrement, toilet paper and condoms in the dunes in front of the park when there is camping

allowed

-It is said that a van must be fully contained (with toilet) to freedom camp however we have experienced that this does not mean it gets used.

(See screenshot attached below)

-At a time when we are dealing with a pandemic, having to deal also with human waste in public areas is embarrassingly poor judgement on part of the council.

-As you can see, the Christchurch council has acknowledged this is a real issue;

3. Freedom campers cause damage to surrounding trees

-I've witnessed canopies being strung up from branches for shade shelters

-I've witnessed branches being snapped off to allow campers underneath.

4. Freedom campers brings more activity onto the beach at night times

-this causes disturbances to endangered/native birds

-this increases risks of fires/fireworks

-this brings more off-track traffic through sand dunes which breaks up the grasses establishing in the dunes - which are part of an ecosystem. Piha is a regional park which is home to many endangered species. It is well established that humans are the biggest threat to these and adding night time campers to an already busy daytime beach shows a complete lack of respect for this precious taonga.

5. The Piha beachfront is already at capacity during weekends for parking.

-adding more congestion to this is not fair on day trippers and not fair on locals who have to witness cars idling looking for parks and filling the air with city fumes.

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Māngere Bridge - I am concerned about the impact of freedom camping on Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Road in Māngere Bridge, both of which lead to Ambury Regional Farm Park and are actively used by our walking group.

These two environmentally sensitive areas need protection from freedom camping through a prohibition and compliance/policing. Freedom camping (even short stays) raise the following concerns:

- Disruption to bird roosting areas: I am very concerned about the impact of freedom camping on migratory bird roosting areas along Kiwi Esplanade. This area is known internationally as a destination for migratory birds including South Island pied oystercatchers, pied stilts, wrybills, Godwits, and others. Migratory birds rely on the grassed areas of the Kiwi Esplanade foreshore reserve (especially from 64 Kiwi Esplanade along to the end of the Esplanade where it joins the Farm. But these special birds also use the pahoehoe lava along the entire Esplanade to roost.

- During roosting season it is crucial that these beautiful birds are left in peace to recover from or prepare for their long journeys. Some visitors already run or drive mini motorbikes illegally through the roosting flocks causing distress and making them take flight. Long term protection of roosting areas is crucial to the health and wellbeing of our birdlife and it is vital that this area be excluded from Freedom Campers.

I- increased litter: People come, park up, stay for short or long periods and sometimes overnight in cars or vans that are not self-contained, then drive away leaving their rubbish where they stopped.

- Noise problems along the Esplanade and Ambury Road: In the past there have been significant noise problems in these areas. Freedom camping adds another dimension to an ongoing issue that flares from time to time.

- Retaining views/view shafts: Views of the harbour will be obstructed by freedom camping vehicles. The consultation document accepts that protecting views is a reasonable consideration.

- Increased use and pressure – More people are using Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Farm areas for recreation (especially due to lockdown and increasing housing density). There is enough pressure on these areas for parking without adding more pressure from freedom camping vehicles.

- Compliance and Policing: I understand there is no additional funding planned for compliance and policing of the new bylaws, so how will problems be addressed. Just because a bylaw requires vehicles to be self-contained doesn't mean freedom campers will follow the rules. Noise control and the police are already under pressure.

- Ambury Farm has a proper camping ground and its use ought to be encouraged, rather than allowing freedom camping in a special natural environment that needs protection.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Māngere Bridge - We are concerned about the impact of freedom camping Māngere Bridge.

We are writing to seek a PROHIBITION ON FREEDOM CAMPING IN THE FOLLOWING LOCATIONS IN MANGERE BRIDGE:

- The full length of Kiwi Esplanade (including all parking areas and the entrance to Ambury Farm at the western end) and the length of Ambury Road (most of which hugs the farm and at the western end provides access to the main entrance of Ambury Regional Park).
- The entrance to Māngere Mountain and surrounding high traffic areas (including the Maunga parking areas, Domain Lane, and parking areas near the Maunga Skate Park, Memorial Hall, Plunket rooms, Tennis Club, Bowling Club, Scout Hall, and Māngere Bridge School.)

These key locations in Māngere Bridge need protection from freedom camping through prohibition and compliance/policing. These areas are already used inappropriately for freedom camping with significant detrimental effects. Given our community's proximity to the airport, our community could become a key destination point for freedom camping.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Mangere Bridge - We are concerned about the impact of freedom camping Māngere Bridge.

We are writing to seek a PROHIBITION ON FREEDOM CAMPING IN THE FOLLOWING LOCATIONS IN MANGERE BRIDGE:

- The full length of Kiwi Esplanade (including all parking areas and the entrance to Ambury Farm at the western end) and the length of Ambury Road (most of which hugs the farm and at the western end provides access to the main entrance of Ambury Regional Park).
- The entrance to Māngere Mountain and surrounding high traffic areas (including the Maunga parking areas, Domain Lane, and parking areas near the Maunga Skate Park, Memorial Hall, Plunket rooms, Tennis Club, Bowling Club, Scout Hall, and Māngere Bridge School.)

These key locations in Māngere Bridge need protection from freedom camping through prohibition and compliance/policing. These areas are already used inappropriately for freedom camping with significant detrimental effects. Given our community's proximity to the airport, our community could become a key destination point for freedom camping.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

I'm writing to support the Titirangi R&R Association's submission regarding prohibiting freedom camping in the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area, except at specifically identified controlled sites. While much of the Heritage Area is within the Regional Park, the problem will be road reserves and the villages outside the regional park (Titirangi, Laingholm etc) where freedom camping will be able to happen. I am especially concerned about many of the dead-end roads in Titirangi that end in the bush or the beach, are quiet and will be attractive for freedom campers.

I feel strongly that freedom camping should be banned at Karekare, Piha, Jenkins Bay, French Bay, Wood Bay, Davies Bay, Herrings Cove and Laingholm Beach – all small beaches with barely enough parking for locals to enjoy.

Titirangi and Laingholm already have their native bush threatened by tree-felling, rampant invasive weeds and animal pests. We don't need more humans taking more than they give.

Freedom campers often cause litter, light fires, use the environment as a toilet, pollute streams with washing and waste disposal, create noise and lights at night.

I think that one or two officially designated freedom camping parking spots at Titirangi Beach would be fine. There are also two beaches that aren't as popular as others along Huia Road. One is Mill Bay, and the other is Kaitarakihi. This latter stunning beach could be further developed specifically for freedom campers, with specific areas designated for freedom camping. There should be no ambiguity about which beaches allow freedom camping, and which don't.

It should be easy for locals to report overstayers and freedom campers who are littering and engaging in other antisocial behaviours, and these complaints must lead to decisive action.

In many communities rows of campervans freedom camping have blocked carparks and beach access for day visitors. This is a real threat in places like Piha & French Bay where the new bylaw would allow them to stay for two nights plus the days in between, blocking up carparks for day visitors and displacing the parking into other streets that are narrow and winding. This will become a safety issue.

In addition, allowing freedom camping will put existing campsite operators out of business. It is already a seasonal and challenging business to be in. Supporting accessible facilities for everyone is important if we want to keep coastal campsites going.

Personally, I think that allowing freedom camping is creating headaches and unnecessary work for Council, with very little reward. The downsides of signage, policing the matter, dealing with public complaints and the toll on the environment, makes it not worth it. We live in a community where we generally give to receive. Freedom campers don't honour that basic mutualism.

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Māngere Bridge - I am concerned about the impact of freedom camping on Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Road in Māngere Bridge, both of which lead to Ambury Regional Farm Park and are actively used by our walking group.

These two environmentally sensitive areas need protection from freedom camping through a prohibition and compliance/policing. Freedom camping (even short stays) raise the following concerns:

- Disruption to bird roosting areas: I am very concerned about the impact of freedom camping on migratory bird roosting areas along Kiwi Esplanade. This area is known internationally as a destination for migratory birds including South Island pied oystercatchers, pied stilts, wrybills, Godwits, and others. Migratory birds rely on the grassed areas of the Kiwi Esplanade foreshore reserve (especially from 64 Kiwi Esplanade along to the end of the Esplanade where it joins the Farm. But these special birds also use the pahoehoe lava along the entire Esplanade to roost.

- During roosting season it is crucial that these beautiful birds are left in peace to recover from or prepare for their long journeys. Some visitors already run or drive mini motorbikes illegally through the roosting flocks causing distress and making them take flight. Long term protection of roosting areas is crucial to the health and wellbeing of our birdlife and it is vital that this area be excluded from Freedom Campers.

I- increased litter: People come, park up, stay for short or long periods and sometimes overnight in cars or vans that are not self-contained, then drive away leaving their rubbish where they stopped.

- Noise problems along the Esplanade and Ambury Road: In the past there have been significant noise problems in these areas. Freedom camping adds another dimension to an ongoing issue that flares from time to time.

- Retaining views/view shafts: Views of the harbour will be obstructed by freedom camping vehicles. The consultation document accepts that protecting views is a reasonable consideration.

- Increased use and pressure – More people are using Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Farm areas for recreation (especially due to lockdown and increasing housing density). There is enough pressure on these areas for parking without adding more pressure from freedom camping vehicles.

- Compliance and Policing: I understand there is no additional funding planned for compliance and policing of the new bylaws, so how will problems be addressed. Just because a bylaw requires vehicles to be self-contained doesn't mean freedom campers will follow the rules. Noise control and the police are already under pressure.

- Ambury Farm has a proper camping ground and its use ought to be encouraged, rather than allowing freedom camping in a special natural environment that needs protection.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Mangere Bridge - I kindly request that the following Mangere Bridge areas are added to the prohibited area list for Freedom Camping:

- Kiwi Esplanade (east to west)
- the roads surrounding Ambury Farm
- The roads surrounding Maunuga Mangere (Mangere Mountain and Domain)
- The northern end of Coronation Road and Waterfront Road

Due to close proximity to Auckland airport and campervan pick-up/drop-off hubs, combined with the attractiveness of the Manukau harbour-side and Regional Farm, these roads are likely to become high volume freedom camper areas, and a renowned destination freedom camping site. Should they be permitted the high volume of freedom campers will heavily impact the sensitive natural environment and the enjoyment and health of the public who use the reserve and the farm.

Rationale for adding these areas to the prohibited area list:

1. Disruption to bird roosting areas: The foreshore reserve is internationally known as a destination for migratory birds including South Island pied oystercatchers, pied stilts, wrybills and Godwits. They use the pahoehoe lava along the Esplanade to roost and especially the grassed areas. It is critical that these birds are not distressed as they recover from or prepare for their long journeys. Protection of roosting areas is crucial to the health and wellbeing of our birdlife.

2. Risk to delicate mangroves right along the foreshore of Manukau Harbour: The trash and sewerage from self contained toilets, or freedom campers just pooing in the bushes, would risk the delicate mangrove ecosystem. Even already today, there have also been many observed instances of people using the reserve as a toilet and emptying their toileting cassettes straight into the Manukau Harbour.

3. Increased litter: Rubbish dropped by the public is already a problem along the reserve. After a sunny weekend, bins are overflowing already. We already have community rubbish collection working bees to deal with rubbish dropped by people using these areas. People come, park up, stay for short or long periods and some overnight in cars or vans that are not self-contained, then drive away leaving their rubbish where they stopped. Litter would increase dramatically if these was allowed to become a freedom camping destination and there is also a health and safety risk to the public that enjoy the reserve and the waterside.

4. Noise problems: In the past there have been significant noise problems along Kiwi Esplanade. The Local Board has exercised leadership in working with the Police, residents, Māngere Bridge Residents and Ratepayers, and Council Officers to deal with this unruly and antisocial behaviour. Freedom camping would add probability of re-igniting this.

5. Risks shutting out local families from the area: The local reserves, pedestrian bridge, fishing areas and Ambury farm should be places for local families and people to enjoy, without the congestion and lack of parking driven by volumes of campervans and freedom campers.

6. There is no supporting infrastructure from campers to dump their trash, empty their toilets or dispose of grey water. Risk that it gets dumped into the delicate natural environment of Manukau Harbour.

7. Loss of views/view shafts: Views of the harbour, mountain and farm will be obstructed by freedom camping vehicles for many residents. The consultation document accepts that protecting views is a reasonable consideration.

8. Increased Pressure on all resources that public use. Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Farm are enjoyed by many of the public of South Auckland for recreation. It is one of the jewels of South Auckland and is becoming popular due to increased housing density in Mangere and neighbouring communities + has been discovered by many during the Covid-19 lockdowns. There is already pressure on toilets, rubbish bins and parking, without adding overnight camping vans.

It is ridiculous to allow freedom camping in the Mangere Bridge area when there is already a Council run camping ground at Ambury Farm Park. This camping ground is affordable, accessible and has appropriate facilities and rules to ensure there is no environmental impact and no disruption to the public enjoyment of the area.

While I appreciate there would be general rules in place to minimise long stays and semi-permanent residency by freedom campers, if there is no additional money for ensuring policing and compliance by Auckland Council, it will fall to the local residents and the Local Board to address those who do not stay by the rules.

I am most concerned that one of the most environmentally sensitive, beautiful and much enjoyed areas of South Auckland will be detrimentally impacted unless it is prohibited to freedom campers. So much has been done by both the Council and the Local Board over the last 20 years to enhance the Manukau Harbour, Kiwi Esplanade Reserve and Ambury Farm, it would be devastating to see it undone due to lack of foresight regarding the full impact of permitting freedom campers.

I request that we prohibit freedom camping in these Mangere Bridge areas, and encourage our visitors to use the Council owned campsite and Ambury Farm instead. This is a special area and an asset to New Zealand. Let's look after it for generations to come.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Piha - As a resident of Piha I would like to oppose the proposal to allow freedom camping in this area. The reasons for which I have listed below:

- Most Piha roads included in the proposal are easily blocked by vehicles parked on the side of the road which frequently blocks emergency vehicles. Larger campers will exacerbate this issue.
- There are insufficient services to support campers. Although they require self-contained toilets on board, the reality is, most camper owners will avoid using these if they can, and others are likely to freedom camp without these facilities installed knowing that the chances of getting caught are low. Our sand dunes and roadways are always littered with human waste after busy weekends.
- There are no toilet pumping stations in Piha and there is a major risk of campers discharging their waste in local waterways.
- This is an area for the public to enjoy. Camp sites effectively privatise these areas and limit public enjoyment. Already we find busy pathways to the beach and various tracks are often blocked by campervans and their associated set-up such as tables, chairs, etc..
- Visitors to this area frequently abuse it by littering and starting fires, both of which potentially damage the fragile ecosystem, and the latter of which causes a health and safety risk.
- Local residents are very upset and concerned about this proposal. Should the proposal go ahead, this will cause residents a great deal of stress and anxiety and this will inevitably bubble over into conflicts with campers.
- There is no economic benefit to the local area, which relies on volunteers to provide emergency services and environmental preservation activities.
- Piha does already have a wonderful campground that is close to the beach, there is no need for campervanners to freedom camp at Piha.

Re Tohora Cres Omaha - Attached are two drawings that relate to the potential problems that will occur if the council permits Freedom Camping on the front left hand Berms of properties that occupy the full length of the crescent.

FLOODING

The green line of the Rodney District Council Drawing represents a Swale that is positioned at the approximate centre line of the grassed and in some cases semi planted swales that span between the concrete drives of the properties. Although cesspit drainage does exist flooding of the berm area is frequent throughout the year and with significant storms can be up to 500 to 600mm in depth.

BOAT PARKING

As boat trailers are not permitted to park on the Berms especially overnight owners park them on the grass or concreted areas of the front property yards. The attached sketch is a diagrammatic view of the Berm with the blue lines representing the pathway for both the out going and incoming parking manoeuvre's. Depending on parking location this takes up to 50 % of the available berm area.

SLOPING GROUND

The ground slopes of the Berm vary from the fence to the swale and road to the swale and levelling devices are required to ensure level positioning. Also manoeuvring the Camping unit can cause damage to the Berm surface. Repairs by the Council or most probably will fall upon the property owner.

There is no doubt other encounters which will cause disputes between parties and I do not believe that Freedom Camping is appropriate for Tohora Crescent and other streets that experience these problems.

I do not believe that Omaha is the correct venue for Freedom Camping.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Kiwi Esplanade/Ambury Road Mangere Bridge - I am writing to provide feedback regarding the proposed Freedom Camping Bylaw and specifically to prohibition on Freedom Camping along the full length of Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Road.

Due to their proximity to Auckland airport and the camping van pick up and drop off hubs, combined with the attractiveness of harbourside and Regional Farm, these roads require protection from inundation of freedom camper vans. They would be very likely to become a renowned destination freedom camping site. Should they be permitted there will be detrimental impacts on the sensitive environment and the enjoyment and health of the public who use the reserve and the farm.

My concerns are:

- Disruption to bird roosting areas : The foreshore reserve is internationally known as a destination for migratory birds including South Island pied oystercatchers, pied stilts, wrybills and Godwits. They use the pahoehoe lava along the Esplanade to roost and especially the grassed areas. It is critical that these birds are not distressed as they recover from or prepare for their long journeys. Protection of roosting areas is crucial to the health and wellbeing of our birdlife.
- Increased litter: Rubbish being dropped by the public is already a problem along the reserve. After any weekend, bins are overflowing and the current level of council services is insufficient to handle the load from the current demand. We already have community rubbish collection working bees to deal with rubbish dropped by people using these areas. People come, park up, stay for short or long periods and some overnight in cars or vans that are not self-contained, then drive away leaving their rubbish where they stopped. There have also been many observed instances of these people using the reserve as a toilet and emptying their toileting cassettes straight into the Manukau Harbour. Litter would increase dramatically if these was allowed to become a freedom camping destination and there is also a health and safety risk to the public that enjoy the reserve and the waterside.
- Noise problems : In the past there have been significant noise problems along Kiwi Esplanade. The Local Board has exercised leadership in working with the Police, residents, Māngere Bridge Residents and Ratepayers, and Council Officers to deal with this unruly and antisocial behaviour. Freedom camping would add probability of re-igniting this.

- Loss of views/view shafts: Views of the harbour, mountain and farm will be obstructed by freedom camping vehicles for many residents. The consultation document accepts that protecting views is a reasonable consideration.
- Increased Pressure on all resources that public use. Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Farm are enjoyed by many of the public of South Auckland for recreation. It is one of the jewels of South Auckland and is becoming popular due to increased housing density in Mangere and neighbouring communities + has been discovered by many during the Covid-19 lockdowns. There is already pressure on toilets, rubbish bins and parking, without adding overnight camping vans.

It is ridiculous to allow Freedom Camping along Kiwi Esplanade and Ambury Road when there is a Council run campsite at Ambury Farm Park. This camping ground is affordable, accessible and has appropriate facilities and rules to ensure there is no environmental impact and no disruption to the public enjoyment of the area.

While I appreciate there would be general rules in place to minimise long stays and semi permanent residency by freedom campers, if there is no additional money for ensuring policing and compliance by Auckland Council, it will fall to the local residents and the Local Board to address those who do not stay by the rules. It would be simple for freedom campers to simply cycle around camping sites, no matter what maximum stays that were added. I am also concerned that there seems to be no protected or restricted areas in the Mangere/Mangere Bridge area

I am most concerned that one of the most environmentally sensitive, beautiful and much enjoyed areas of South Auckland will be detrimentally impacted unless it is prohibited to freedom campers and they are encouraged to use the Council owned campsite and Ambury Farm instead. So much has been done by both the Council and the Local Board over the 2 decades to enhance the Manukau Harbour, Kiwi Esplanade Reserve and Ambury Farm, it would be devastating to see it undone due to lack of foresight regarding the full impact of permitting freedom campers to save a few dollars rather than using the campsite so close by.

Thank you for your consideration of this feedback.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - As a resident of Piha I would like to oppose the proposal to allow freedom camping in this area. The reasons for which I have listed below:

- Most Piha roads included in the proposal are easily blocked by vehicles parked on the side of the road which frequently blocks emergency vehicles. Larger campers will exacerbate this issue.
- There are insufficient services to support campers. Although they require self contained toilets on board, the reality is, most camper owners will avoid using these if they can, and others are likely to freedom camp without these facilities installed knowing that the chances of getting caught are low. Our sand dunes and roadways are always littered with human waste after busy weekends.
- There are no toilet pumping stations in Piha and there is a major risk of campers discharging their waste in local waterways.
- This is an area for the public to enjoy. Camp sites effectively privatise these areas and limit public enjoyment.
- Visitors to this area frequently abuse it by littering and starting fires, both of which potentially damage the fragile ecosystem, and the latter of which causes a health and safety risk.
- Local residents are very upset and concerned about this proposal. Should the proposal go ahead, this will cause residents a great deal of stress and anxiety and this will inevitably bubble over into conflicts with campers.
- There is no economic benefit to the local area, which relies on volunteers to provide emergency services and environmental preservation activities.

We own at the Pakiri Beach Holiday Park and would like to make a submission in regard to the schedule of prohibited areas for freedom camping and the areas for restrictions by number of vehicles.

Restricted areas.

We note with interest these appear to be all Council owned land. The bylaw is being used to protect Council land but not ratepayers who are endeavouring to provide a service to paying campers.

No such thing as free camping.

Freedom camping is free to the user but comes at a cost to the rate payer. Would appreciate you and your committee taking this into consideration.

We note with interest that they are generally Council owned property so Council is using the bylaw to protect their interests but there is nothing to protect us as a ratepayer and operator of the Pakiri Beach Holiday Park.

We mow and maintain a wide grass berm where our property fronts on to Pakiri River Road and then there is a wide grass berm from our property to the end of the road and the public toilets at Pakiri Beach.

We note the grounds of Pakiri Hall are prohibited for freedom camping and we request that the last 500 m of the road side of Pakiri River Road be prohibited as an area for freedom camping..

We have considerable costs imposed on us by Council requirements and Council rates and we feel it is unreasonable to allow freedom camping in front of our property or from our property to the end of the road.

We have had freedom campers in the past and they often feel free to enter our holiday Park and utilise our services for free

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - I wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the road reserves in the Piha, Karekare and Anawhata areas, that is, all roads from the intersection of Piha Road with Scenic Drive.

My reasons for this are:

1. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety.
2. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes and native vegetation.
3. Freedom camping in road reserves within forest could spread kauri dieback.
4. Freedom camping at beachfronts and entrances to tracks and beaches will block access for day visitors.
5. The West Coast and parkland is already at capacity from people from Auckland and further afield, with overflowing rubbish bins, parking blocking driveways and carparks full often from before midday.
6. The area cannot accommodate more visitors especially as the bylaw allows parking for days on end.
7. There are already issues with access for emergency vehicles such as fire trucks being blocked by vehicles, and freedom camping will make this worse.
8. There is provision for camping by campervans within regional parks and at the Piha campground so it is not necessary to provide further sites.

Issues for the Waitakere Ranges

Environmental harm

Camping could take place in some of our most fragile eco-systems that are prone to damage and harm from rubbish, trampling, introduction of pests, spread of kauri dieback, and pet animals. People are currently discouraged from going off track and many tracks are closed because of kauri dieback; they are also asked not to go off accessways through dune areas because dune plants are fragile and birds nest on the ground, however, freedom camping could bring people into these areas.

There is also a risk from campers lighting fires when our Ranges are highly prone to difficult-to-fight wildfires.

Campervans can also be large vehicles that do not "fit" within some of our rural and coastal roads. Drivers are often strangers to the area and ignore or do not understand height restriction road signs. This is particularly the case at Piha where limbs have been removed from pohutukawa in Beach Valley Road following strikes by campervans, and Karekare, where a highly valued pohutukawa extends at a low height over Karekare Road, the entrance to the beach.

Urbanisation

The Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area Act 2008 seeks to protect the natural values and wilderness of the Ranges. It also seeks for the built environment to be subservient to the natural environment and for the dark and quiet to be protected. While large numbers of day visitors visit the coast on summer holidays and weekends, at other times these places retain their remoteness and wilderness.

Freedom camping will allow a built structure and domestic activities (watching TV etc) to intrude into the wilderness, not just during the day time, but at night time, thus introducing noise and light into the heritage area environment.

It is likely that word will some get out through social media of places to freedom camp in the Waitakere Ranges. In other places, beachfronts have experienced a "wall" of campervans and it has been necessary to prohibit freedom camping on the beach front – eg. Sullivans Bay at Mahurangi.

Generally, self-contained campervans are too big for one parking space and commonly take up several.

Health & safety

Although campervans would be required to be self-contained under the bylaw, campers using the dunes and bush as lavatories has been a persistent issue. Campers also use showers in changing sheds to wash and use hand basins to wash clothes and dishes which is not only unhygienic but also reduces the water supply in places which depend on roof water. There have been reports of campers taking water for their own use, and also visiting neighbouring houses asking for water or to use showers.

There are also health & safety issues related to the use of the road corridor in the Ranges. Some of the road pull-off areas on Piha Road and the Scenic Drive function as places where slow drivers can pull over. Safety issues will arise if these are used for freedom camping.

Access

Freedom camping over a several day period effectively privatises the space for the personal use of the campers, which can extend to tables and chairs and personal belongings taking up more space.

At Piha and other places, beachfronts and parks are at a premium for recreation for day-trip visitors from Auckland and further afield. Surfers also make great use of the carparks. It is quite usual for these to be full on weekends and public holidays and during the summer period.

Freedom camping will make it more difficult for these day visitors to access the coast and tracks into parkland.

Economic impact of freedom camping

This is an aspect of access for visitors to the coast, if the economic impact makes existing camping facilities less viable. The Ranges contain ample informal and more formal camping places to meet the demand for camping. In the regional parkland, campervans can stay for a small fee at eight places in the Waitakeres: Arataki, Karamatura, Cascades Kauri, Cornwallis, Anawhata (Craw), Glen Esk, Whatipu and Log Race Road. There are also other tenting facilities. There is also a major campground on Piha Domain that is run under lease.

By extending freedom camping, the viability of these existing campgrounds is undermined. At Piha Domain, the campground has been reduced in size by flooding. Council has required the area available for camping to be reduced. Allowing freedom camping for two nights in all the carparks on the beachfront will have a major impact on the viability of the very long-standing and valued Piha Campground which currently provides access to the beaches and parks to a wide range of visitors.

I would like to see freedom camping prohibited in these specific areas:

- Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road, local park
- Marine Parade North, carparks on beachfront
- Marine Parade South, carparks on beachfront
- Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road
- Karekare Road, Parking area at beach (partly road reserve)
- Anawhata Road, entrance to Rose Track and White Track
- Anawhata Road, northern end, end of road parking area
- Te Henga Bethells Road, northern end carpark at beach
- Bethells Road, entrance to Lake Wainamu Track
- French Bay, French Bay carparks

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

- Karekare Beach – concerned about the carpark at Karekare. Existing facilities under pressure. Recent floods caused extensive damage to the infrastructure there. More carparks will be unavailable due to the infrastructure. Only one road in and out which is damaged and won't be fixed for a while. No ranger to monitor compliance. People are aware of this and do freedom camp illegally. Day trippers are the highest priority in Karekare – support them using facilities to use the Hillary track. First response needs to be able to get into this area as well. Wouldn't be able to get in if carpark is full, which is a danger to lives.

- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

- Waiheke – does not support freedom camping on Waiheke island. Encountered and taken note of impact of freedom camping and homeless issue of people living in vehicles on the island. Freedom camping in Waiheke is problematic, it doesn't fall under the usual spots for freedom camping. It's a destination place. Under huge infrastructural pressures. Without reinforced resourced mechanism, difficult to discern between homeless and freedom campers. Parking is very limited. There's a sort of collision of residents, holidaymakers, bach owners, day trippers to enjoy the island. Limited resource. Enforcement will be absolutely key – needs to be a dedicated person. Even that would still be unsatisfactory. Enforcement on Waiheke is already woeful.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

The general rules sound logical, in principal. However, given Auckland City Council's current budget deficits I cannot imagine how these rules will be monitored and enforced if there are problems. Substandard vehicles that don't meet the self-containment standards are rife in NZ and rules are regularly flouted. I feel it will be primarily up to residents to monitor the freedom camping situation and doubt there will be little response from the council when problems occur.

- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? Freedom campers sounds like stereotyping putting blame when we should use General. Meaning public anyone can be responsible rather than categorising a group.

More facilities and areas where the general can go to enjoy the outdoors.

Their shouldn't be a time frame on how one must enjoy our surroundings. A public domain belongs to everyone not a party of people that sit behind a desk and listen to squabblers that live in a pretentious area. So that gives them rights to make claim if for example they see a vehicle parked on a beach road side. Where they are doing nothing wrong.

People in general I've seen in parks beaches are just too blame I've watched them leave there rubbish behind or broken glass bottles and never pick up after them. These are locals as well I know for a fact I live in a well established area.

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? Provide areas for those that cannot get into homes especially renters with animals.

Most people are having to live now in cars or camper vans. Life is hard enough with people mouthing off where people are trying to live the best they can.

Council should provide toilets washing areas rubbish bins etc.

If they feel the need then maybe a small fee to use these facilities.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain)

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain)

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

No freedom camping should be allowed in Auckland. Have you not see the mess they make in beautiful central Otago?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

No freedom camping in Auckland. All campers should use camp grounds and pay for the facilities that they use. Why should Auckland residents and ratepayers be subsidising foreigners travel in New Zealand.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle. It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: Requiring campers to leave at 8am, before standard business hours begin, protects access to shared parking or other amenities for other users – which is more of a priority than campers' convenience, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a longer no-return period means most campers are unlikely to visit an area more than once

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. ### General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: Having a shorter no-return period means campers would be able to return to a favourite place if they wanted to, as part of a longer trip

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, Although no serviced areas have been identified in this proposal, providing sites suitable for non-self-contained vehicles should be a priority for council, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard, It would be too hard to enforce the self-containment rule without referencing the National Standard

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): There should be no freedom camping in Auckland at all, but as central government and Goff foisted this on us, there should be rules so they're not shitting in our parks.

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain): freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained and electric, no older than 2 years.

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): Maximum stay of one night in the entire Auckland Isthmus.

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain)

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain): They should depart at 5.30am or sunrise, whichever comes first.

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain)

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain): Shouldn't be able to return ever.

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? I think freedom campers duration limits should not be designated by roads or immediate area but instead by areas like what has been proposed for Waiheke otherwise it will be possible to for "freedom campers" to be able to live in the same area.

For example, a freedom camper could live permanently in the Matakana area simply by staying at Matakana for 2 nights then staying at Omaha, Snells Beach, Point Wells, Leigh, Warkworth & Algies Bay every 2 days in the same spot at each place then back to Matakana again and repeat the same cycle staying in the same spot every 2 weeks over a year , which is not what freedom camping is about.

The same could apply to just about every locality, including cities, suburbs, tourist spots, rural areas etc throughout New Zealand. This could also be compounded by a groups of freedom campers sharing the same circuit at the same or different times for 1 to 2 days at the same spots every fortnight over a year which could lead to all sorts of social and safety issues for the communities where this happens.

While I'm sure that this wouldn't apply to a lot of freedom campers, there may well be a lot of so-called freedom campers who would take full advantage of this loophole.

I believe this should be addressed because if it isn't, it could lead to all sorts of unpleasant social and safety issues.

If what I've outlined above isn't addressed, then the people who have businesses, homes, holiday places etc could be severely compromised.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Freedom campers should be limited to designated camping grounds which have all the necessary toilet facilities etc.

Old Service Centre 75-81 Hector Sanderson Road, Great Barrier Island, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Great Barrier is finely balanced socially, environmentally and economically and tends to be a pretty peaceful place over a good part of the year.

So, to allow freedom campers who could technically stay on the island as long as they like, wherever they like could prove to be very disruptive to both the environment and to the local communities.

Freedom camper should be limited to designated camping grounds which have all the necessary toilet facilities etc.

Devonport-Takapuna Local Board area

Prohibited sites

Queens Parade, Devonport, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? It's a heavily used commercial, visitor and tourist area throughout the day so not at all suitable for freedom camping

Becroft Park Reserve 8A Becroft Drive, Forrest Hill, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? I don't know

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? I think freedom campers duration limits should not be designated by roads or immediate areas but instead by larger areas like what has been proposed for Waiheke and also over longer periods - 2 weeks is way to short a term. Otherwise it will be possible to for "freedom campers" to be able to live permanently in the same geographic area if that's what they want to do.

For example, a freedom camper could live permanently in the great Forrest Hill area simply by staying at the same 7 seven spots every 2 days just a few kilometres away from each other over a year, which is not what freedom camping is about.

The same could apply to just about every locality, including cities, suburbs, tourist spots, rural areas etc throughout New Zealand. This could also be compounded by a groups of freedom campers sharing the same circuit at the same or different times for 1 to 2 days at the same spots every fortnight over a year which could lead to all sorts of social and safety issues for the communities where this happens.

While I'm sure that this wouldn't apply to a lot of freedom campers, there may well be a lot of so-called freedom campers who would take full advantage of this loophole.

I believe this should be addressed because if it isn't, it could lead to all sorts of unpleasant social and safety issues.

Franklin Local Board area

Prohibited sites

Manukau Heads - Orpheus Road boat ramp, Manukau Heads, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? No – freedom camping should be allowed with area-specific restrictions

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): General rules give a sensible framework for all freedom campers so that all can enjoy doing so

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, Although no serviced areas have been identified in this proposal, providing sites suitable for non-self-contained vehicles should be a priority for council

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, Shorter stays are already the norm for most freedom campers, so a stricter rule is not necessary, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrict

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Although I support the 2 day stay I think it would be reasonable to require the departure by 9am each day - ie only staying overnight and shifting during the day. May be this does not have to apply in all locations, however. As a freedom camper I would not want to be staying during the day where I might be limiting the access of locals where as over night you are seldom restricting others.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Ōrākei Local Board area

Prohibited sites

St Heliers Community Library and Hall 32 St Heliers Bay Road, St Heliers, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? This area can be quite busy even at nights because of the restaurants in the area

Restricted sites

Carpark on Road Reserve by Anderson's Beach Reserve Near intersection of Riddell Road and Glendowie Road, Glendowie. Do you agree that freedom camping should be restricted in this area? Yes – restricted freedom camping should be allowed, and I support the proposed restrictions

Which of the proposed restrictions for this area would you want to change at Anderson's Beach Reserve?

What do you think is the appropriate maximum number of vehicles allowed at this site?

Other (please specify):

What do you think is the appropriate maximum stay at this site?

What do you think is the appropriate departure time at this site?

Other (please specify):

What do you think is the appropriate no-return period at this site?

Other (please specify):

Where do you think the freedom camping parking spaces should be located within this area?

Do you have any other comments you would like to make about this area? This is a lovely area to freedom camp in and as a local from Glendowie Rd I am very happy to see people staying there overnight. As there is only a small area there it does need to be a limit, however

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Camping should only be allowed in designated camping sites. There should be no Freedom Camping on privately owned land or any undesignated camping site. No camping should be allowed unless the campervans have toilet facilities as there has been disgusting behaviour where no toilets are contained within the campervan. As it stands Freedom Camping is open to total abuse with the public having no means of assistance to stop individuals camping on their land or in their street. It is totally unacceptable.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Freedom Camping should only be allowed on designated camping sites - certainly not on publicly owned land or on council streets. There are many local areas where the council has not considered banning these campers. What about the areas in and around Eastern suburbs, Velanoweth Green, Glover Park, Melanesia Park - list goes on and on - these Freedom Campers could spoil the freedom ratepayers now have to enjoy local areas and for their children to enjoy the parks and playgrounds. Why are we having any Freedom campers at all - they can go in proper camping sites.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

You represent and are effectively employed by the citizens and ratepayers of Auckland but you are not acting in our best interests. You are allowing too much freedom to temporary visitors. Do not allow them on every road. Limit them to specific designated parking areas that have proper facilities and make them pay. It is our city not theirs and it is our roads and streets that will be affected. Who is ever going to enforce the 2 day rule and if so who pays; the rate payer or the camper? Who pays to clean up the mess on the streets? the ratepayer again not the camper.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

There should be NO freedom camping allowed anywhere in the Auckland Region. Freedom camping leads to pollution of human waste rubbish etc etc . The idea that the Council is even thinking of allowing freedom Camping is an utter disgrace.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? maximum of two nights and no-return period rule of 14 days are excessively restrict. It seems it's only considering the interest of people that were fortunate enough to have a house in a nice place, and don't want campers nearby their properties

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? People who decided to live fulltime on a self-contained vehicle, due to the miserable high house prices, will be forced to move every 2 days, That should be at least 5 days, giving this people the opportunity to settle for a whole business week if they wish

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): The rule is too generic, maximum of 2 days if fine for Tourist spots, but for public roads is not. For public roads minimum should be 5 days. You could possibly apply 2 maximum days for the same spot on the road, but for the same road it's unfair, special

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain)

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain): If the minimum stay is increased to 5 days, I think the no return of 2 weeks it's fair. But no-return of two weeks it's only in the interest of selfish residents that lives nearby these areas.

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a longer no-return period means most campers are unlikely to visit an area more than once, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

People should not be able to just move from street to street to get around the rules

We should not have different rules vs other regions which have greater restrictions than what are proposed here .

No residential streets should be part of the freedom camping zones

Prevent people from camping out long term

Upweight and upgrade rubbish and toilet facilities to cope with increase id demand

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: Requiring campers to leave at 8am, before standard business hours begin, protects access to shared parking or other amenities for other users – which is more of a priority than campers' convenience

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? By not allowing freedom campers in and around Tamaki Drive. They are notorious for their environmental pollution. There are plenty of camp grounds around the Auckland region that will help regulate the waste that is dumped in public places that freedom campers do

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

So not allow freedom campers in the area. It is too busy an area to have full of camper vans and rubbish

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: Requiring campers to leave at 8am, before standard business hours begin, protects access to shared parking or other amenities for other users – which is more of a priority than campers' convenience, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

Another reason (please explain): I come from Seattle where people are living (not visiting) in camper vans all over the city. ### Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste. Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays. A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): To prevent streets being blocked by unlimited campers every 2 days. As it is they just can move street to street indefinitely

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a longer no-return period means most campers are unlikely to visit an area more than once, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: Requiring campers to leave at 8am, before standard business hours begin, protects access to shared parking or other amenities for other users – which is more of a priority than campers' convenience, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a longer no-return period means most campers are unlikely to visit an area more than once, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Local amenities are for local people first then outsiders with restrictions on the outsiders to ensure they can visit but not at the expense of the locals right to enjoy their area. Experience has showed that unless there are strict enforced rules freedom campers deprive locals of their right to enjoyment of their local area.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, and council has not identified any serviced areas in this proposal

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays. A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?
