- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Currently we have people camping in the public car park at Kennedy Point and also on the beach at Kennedy Point. Why are these people allowed? I am too frightened to visit the beach which I used to swim at nearly daily. The council have turned a blind eye to this - why?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Why are illegal campers allowed to occupy both the public car park and the beach at Kennedy Point Waiheke. It's just absurd that you are doing this survey and doing nothing about these noisy aggressive people

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Waiheke Island - Current Issues

We reside on The Strand, Onetangi, and have experienced the following

Many of the vehicles in which people are sleeping on The Strand (beach front) and surrounds are displaying Self Contained Certificates which are obviously false as the vehicles do not comply – e.g. small SUV vehicles.

There are several large vehicles – e.g. ex bus, furniture van converted which regularly occupy beach front spaces. They may move short distances everfew days and are living in them full time in the immediate area. This is unfair on beachfront properties who pay very high rates and constant Freedom Campers diminish the amenity value of the properties and this is not reflected in the rating base.

We have seen campers enter unoccupied properties to relieve themselves and on several occasions we have arrived at our property to find used toilet paper in our garden.

The Proposals

Specific Prohibited Areas

We note that there are no such areas in Onetangi in the Proposed Schedule. We would request that the Auckland Council ban overnight Freedom/Homeless Camping in these areas:

1. Between First and Third Avenues on The Strand
2. The parking area by the beach in Second Avenue and Second Avenue
3. First Avenue
4. Le Roy Street

During the summer months up to 10 vehicles can park in this area day and night. There are no close toilet facilities.

Oneroa Beach front is another pristine beachfront area which should have Freedom/Homeless Campers banned.

The Proposal is that –

Freedom Campers can only stay on Waiheke for two nights as they need to return to the mainland for Dumping purposes as there are no facilities on Waiheke. This appears a reasonable rule but again needs to be monitored and policed. Perhaps the Auckland Council should investigate a Dump Station.

The rule that Freedom Campers cannot simply move a short distance in an attempt to overcome the 2 night rule is good but will be of little consequence unless a Dump Station is available.

Homeless Persons living in Vehicles

The Freedom Camping Rules should apply to all vehicles in which people are sleeping. If the Auckland Council is of the view that they need to condone a level of homeless living in cars due to the lack of affordable accommodation for some workers etc, then a specific area on Council land away from residential properties and beaches etc on which adequate support facilities of toilets, showers and laundry should be provided. I would envisage that a modest nightly fee would be charged.

The new policies need to be in place for this summer.

All necessary signage needs to be erected prior to Christmas 2021

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Although no serviced areas have been identified in this proposal, providing sites suitable for non-self-contained vehicles should be a priority for council

Another reason (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 10am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A later departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it more likely that they will visit local businesses, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I live in Auckland, and my fear is that freedom campers will make access to local beaches impossible or undesirable for me and my family and neighbours. Rules need to be specific and strict.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

I don't understand the proposal. Are you saying people can freedom camp on all other beaches? They will need protection. One family freedom camped on a portion on French Bay Beach last summer and it restricted beach access for everyone else.

Waitākere Ranges Local Board area

Prohibited sites

Entrance of Goldie Bush walkway Horseman Road, Waitākere, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? I don't know

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area?

Lopdell Hall and House 418 Titirangi Road, Titirangi, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? This is probably a good place for freedom camping but they would need to leave by 8am for the kindergarten etc.

Sandys Parade, Laingholm Bay, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Why this area? Why not Titirangi Beach, French Bay, etc?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be avail

there are not enough areas around Auckland to accommodate the 100's of freedom campers with these new restrictions.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? There are already rules in place against littering, public indecency, etc. Imposing further limitations on freedom camping will simply create barriers and cause rule breakers to escalate their behaviour. It takes away a personal responsibility towards decent behaviour and transfers that responsibility onto a third party, meaning those already inclined to break the rules will simply continue, and those who would have behaved themselves anyway may be barred from interacting with nature, which some might argue as a fundamental human right.

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? Absolutely! Certified self-containment is expensive and preventing anyone without it from camping will simply place yet another restriction on the poorer members of NZ society. As a wealthy individual with a certified self-contained vehicle I am always happy to share the road and campsites with any respectful campers, regardless of whether they're van has an arbitrary blue sticker or not.

This rule will negatively impact campers, and will simply cause a number of would-be campers to have to shell out thousands of unnecessary dollars to an RV builder (many of whom are booked up for the next 6-8 months).

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

Is this because, in your view: The kind of vehicle used for freedom camping in Auckland should be a personal choice, Using a vehicle that is not self-contained does not pose a risk to the environment or public health and safety, The cost of buying, hiring, or converting to a self-contained vehicle is too high, and that could mean some people can't afford to freedom camp in Auckland. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): As stated above: when a new law or rule is introduced it takes away personal agency and places it on a third party, and as has been the case many times overseas when restrictions are in place well behaved people continue to be well behaved, and people looking to break the rules simply increase that behaviour. New York has NO camping restrictions in any of it's state parks, and if the bloody Yanks can do that in a state the size of the North Island and with a population 4 times the size of NZ then what reason do we have to limit our fellow Kiwis? Are we implying that New Zealanders are worse at looking after the environment than New Yorkers? We have plenty of laws that prevent bad behaviour, further restrictions can only serve to make life more complicated for people simply looking to enjoy nature.

There are plenty of laws in place to protect the environment and prevent bad behaviour, an overabundance of regulation simply inconveniences Kiwis trying to enjoy their own country and leaves a bad taste in the mouth for guests trying to do the same. For the sake of human dignity let people manage themselves! If we treat people like children they behave like children.

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should not have to leave by a set time (no set departure time rule)

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

all of them seem to be an attempt to limit and penalise freedom campers --- and very little in the consultation seems to be about enhancing and improving the facilities and options -- - Freedom Camping is a great Kiwi tradition , institution right of passage and BASIC RIGHT of all Kiwis -- the council would do far better to embrace this group and start providing better opportunities -- I own a motorhome and simply dont use it in Auckland or Queenstown as both cities are unfriendly in their attitudes -- In my recent travel -- i have seen members of the public urinate in various lay buys- the garage at hampton downs -- not one was a freedom camper -- but ALL had no access to facilities --- want to cure come of hte issues -- provide more rest stops, toilets at picnic areas - easier access to refuse -- not $12 for one black bag at a recylce centre -- when travelling -- i often dotn have a plan for hte next day and sometimes just enjoy where i am in the mornign -- breackfast read a book -- and its 11.00 after all we are on holiday!!! so making us get up and leave by any set time is really ridiculous -

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

the focus of the discussion and consulation is all wrong -- we shoudl be talkign about how to ensure that freedom camping can happen , enhance the opportunities and experiencs and tackling the issues -- such as not enough public failities, waste disposal, better areas to camp, more of them all of which would tackle the percieved issues --

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? It is Harmful and Extremely DAMAGING to the environment to have them at Piha, Bethels Beach, Titirangi or Karekare. There are numerous road slips that have yet to be fixed and heavy vehicles will add to the stress on the roads, and cause damage, accidents and deaths. Freedom campers create excessive pollution and waste.

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

It is Harmful and Extremely DAMAGING to the environment to have them at Piha, Bethels Beach, Titirangi or Karekare. There are numerous road slips that have yet to be fixed and heavy vehicles will add to the stress on the roads, and cause damage, accidents and deaths. Freedom campers create excessive pollution and waste.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? Don't allow Freedom Camping in Piha. Where will people safely park who visit the area for the day if the roads and parks are open to random campers who Constantly leave behind rubbish, pollution and human waste!! I have seen so called 'freedom campers' park up for several days who refuse to move on. It is already bursting with out of town vehicles parking illegally and unsafely. More importantly Piha has a large community of children who roam freely - allowing transient freedom camping adds a huge potential of risk for these vulnerable young children who currently feel safe in their community. Piha has a designated camping ground for the purposes of those who want to safely stay in the area.. the camp ground allows camping vehicles and it should stay this way. On top of this who is expected to govern the general rules around freedom camping? The residents? I am the owner of property on Glenesk Rd and a property on Piha Rd. The Piha road property has 2 public car parks at the entrance to my property driveway - On a weekly and sometimes daily basis I deal with people trying to sleep overnight in their vehicles, blocking my driveway, leaving large amounts of rubbish (and human waste) near or on my property!! I also have "freedom campers" enter my properties to be nosey (get a better view of beach), ask for supplies, to use the toilet etc and the list goes on. Secondly Glenesk Rd has gone through severe flooding in last few years and adding random campers to the risks around flooding events and exit strategies is another can of worms all together. I strongly oppose the new bylaws suggested for the Waitakere and Piha areas where resident populations pay council rates. Again, we have a perfectly capable camp ground that is the safest option for the community and the camper. If this bylaw is passed I would expect the council to greatly reduce rates on surrounding properties to mitigate the high personal and environmental risks associated with a free for all camping philosophy. Also more CCTV would need to be added for the benefit of everybody's safety and well being.

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Who will govern these rules? Will adequate signage and markings be placed in the proposed freedom camping areas? Will there be a designated council service to call when the rules are not being followed by campers? Will CCTV be placed in these designated camping areas for the safety of the community's children and vulnerable residents? Will sufficient safe public footpaths be added to the Piha roads to accommodate an influx of 'freedom campers' and the general safety of all community members?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Freedom Camping should only be allowed in low density/ low resident areas where there are no alternative accommodations available.

CCTV should be placed in any designated freedom camping areas.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Auckland Council you are destroying this city - it has become an overcrowded hell hole and you continue to allow people to wreck the city. #### General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – freedom camping vehicles should be self-contained, but they shouldn't have to be certified

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment and/or public health and safety, but the National Standard is too restrictive, The cost of buying, hiring, or converting to a certified self-contained vehicle is too high, and that could mean some people can't afford to freedom camp in Auckland

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): The general rules are too broad - several local beach areas (not listed as prohibited or restricted) already have insufficient parking for local use to access the beaches - without being overrun by campers.

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

It is critical that access to Manukau Harbour beaches (particularly those in Waitakere ward) are protected. Allowing freedom camping without restrictions will impact locals visiting the local beach (as many do throughout summer) Parking at beaches such as French Bay is already insufficient - even one or two campers would not only compromise safe access for boaties but for swimmers as well.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

The list of prohibited areas of Freedom Camping needs to be increased. There are no places listed in the Waitakere Ranges and surrounding suburbs. there are always people camping and abusing these areas. French Bay Beach carpark and roadfront should be included as a prohibited place.

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Freedom Camping should be prohibited in French Bay, Titirangi, including the carpark, out the front of the toilets and the beach front. This is constantly abused by people sleeping in cars, and campervans. They defecate in the carpark and behind the toilets. It is unpleasant for locals who need to deal with the abusive people and pick up after them.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I strongly oppose the changes to allow freedom camping in Piha and surrounding areas: Karekare, Anawhata and Bethells Beach.

I live in Piha and have seen first hand illegal freedom camping on Marine Parade South. For example, I had one large motorhome parked directly opposite my home for a period of five days and nights continuously. Despite reporting this, it took a number of days for an enforcement officer to come out and check. Due to the rural location of Piha and surrounding areas, I do not believe any freedom camping time limits would be enforced. Some people potentially would move car spaces and live permanently in their vehicles.

In Piha, there is already a well equipped camping ground with facilities which is centrally located for people to stay at. Therefore there is no need for freedom camping. Locals have employment because of visitors to the campground which would be lost.

I have witnessed first hand, alcohol bottles and rubbish left by illegal campers as well as toilet paper and what appeared to be human excrement left in the sand dunes. I believe these issues would only become more frequent if freedom camping was legal.

With the proposed change to freedom camping, I believe it would be intrusive to my family and the other residents of Piha. Having large campervans overlooking your garden and into your home/ children's bedrooms will create unnecessary anxiety and effect our way of life.

I oppose any freedom camping in Piha and surrounding areas.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

I strongly oppose freedom camping in Piha. It would be of detriment to the local community.

The piha campground is perfectly located and well maintained for campers.

With Pihas rural location, I believe there would be little enforcement of freedom camping. It will effect the lives of locals who have the right to live privately without campervans overlooking their gardens and into their homes which is what happens along Marine Parade South and Marine Parade North.

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): No freedom camping at Te Henga

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain)

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers should be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area at any time (no no-return period rule)

Is this because, in your view: It would be too hard to enforce a no-return period rule

Another reason (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I don't believe council can control this adequately

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

I do not support freedom camping and as a resident of Te Henga would be mortified to see it permitted here. Our roads are narrow and unsafe near the beach. Our parking is already a shambles. Our environment too precious for environmental damage associated with long term stayers. I don't believe council can police this adequately and that long term stayers will eventuate.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, Although council has not identified any serviced areas in this proposal, I am aware of serviced areas on public land which should be included, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays

To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

I would like to see restrictions added to Huia rd, mostly in Huia bay, where often normal weekend traffic can leave roadsides congested with parked cars for visitors to the beach, cafe, dam, walks etc.

I feel it would be dangerous to allow any longer term parking in this area for fear of creating blindspots for larger vehicles that children could be knocked over in, and create even more overflow than there already is for the existing carparks.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, and council has not identified any serviced areas in this proposal. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): I have seen many "self-contained" vehicles at Piha that are little more than a family vehicle with a cassette toilet. These are not always used and on a number of occasions I have come across human waste and toilet paper in the dunes and actually beside the toilet block. I do not feel the self containment rule is strict enough.

I would like parking around Piha to be looked at more closely. Over the spring/summer freedom camping restricted to 2200-0700 in the designated carparks. through out the Ranges freedom camping restricted to "true" self contained vehicles. Camping prohibited in all the pull off areas along the Piha Rd. These pull offs are used by locals for school pick up and drop off and for slow vehicles. I agree with Piha being opened to allow for some freedom camping, however I feel to preserve the essence of the area and for public access to the beach and tracks there needs to be tighter restrictions

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): By having general rules is difficult as different areas will have different issues so all areas cannot be treated the same.

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? I think having freedom camping in popular beachside communities (esp when there is an available camping ground) is crazy and should be prohibited. (ie Piha). There already is not enough parking for day trippers etc without having camper vans taking up even more space by allowing to stay for up to days - so access is being blocked for the general public. In the past when there has been freedom campers they use the sand dunes as toilets and there is toilet paper and human faeces in the sand and on the ground - major health and safety issues. I support freedom camping in isolated places where there is no parking pressures and no camping facilities available. Having the camping in road bays is unsafe as often those road bays are used for slower and unsure drivers to pull over to let other cars pass. Also the roads throughout the Waitakere Ranges are very windy and narrow and not made for big campervans. To have this area promoted as a 'freedom camping' area would result in even more on the road and increased traffic issues and accidents.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain): The current certified self containment sticker is an absolute joke. Even though there might be a 'standard' - no one enforces it. The stickers can be bought and they are put on vehicles that are not self-contained. They have nothing more than a bucket in the back. The campers use the public toilet facilities to wash their clothes/dishes/teeth which is not only unhygienic it is using scarce tank water. If they were really self-contained they wouldn't have to do this. When I've been walking I've had to step over toothpaste scum from campers cleaning their teeth in the outdoor showers and numerous times come across toilet paper and faeces in the sand dunes. In non-popular areas freedom camping can work - but not in busy beach/park communities.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

These proposed rules are presuming that people are going to abide with them. While some will - many wont. Who is going to police the rules - people will just do what they want. There are already many places in the Waitakere Ranges where you can stay for a nominal fee and some areas also some serviced camping grounds. To open this area up completely to freedom campers will destroy it. Having unlimited freedom camping in busy/popular areas is nonsensical. I cannot see how this influx can benefit an area. The freedom campers dont just take up one car space - they spread their table/chairs, awnings, washing lines etc - taking up at least 2 or more car spaces. As much as freedom camping is a great experience for those doing it - sadly some areas are just too busy now to cater for it without it having detrimental effects on the environment, not allowing fair access for all and health and safety effects. It perhaps all looks good on paper - but without it being monitored in some way - it will only lead to problems. All over NZ there have been reports in the newspapers with problems with freedom campers especially in popular tourist destinations.

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): I don't support freedom camping in any form. I don't think it is necessary, we never had it before and it is time to reset NZ and not allow it. People can pay and park in camp grounds.

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I don't see the need for general rules if we are not allowing freedom camping. Time to scrap it and reset how NZ receives overseas visitors.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: Requiring campers to leave at 8am, before standard business hours begin, protects access to shared parking or other amenities for other users – which is more of a priority than campers' convenience, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a shorter no-return period means campers would be able to return to a favourite place if they wa

Please consider including Te Henga/Bethells Beach in the Restricted areas. A local group has made two presentations to the Local Board in the last few months about the exponential growth in visitor numbers. Campervans take up at least two, sometimes three carparks. Nappies, sanitary pads, toilet paper and other rubbish is found everywhere, every weekend, including the carparks at the entrance to Lake Wainamu, the entrance to Te Henga Walkway, the side roads and the carpark at the beach. Locals are aware that freedom campers contribute to this rubbish. There is little enforcement of traffic and parking infringements, and I think this would also apply enforcement of rules relating to freedom campers. The photo below (taken at 10am today) is a small example of how cars are forced to drive on the wrong side of the road on a blind corner at the Lake Wainamu entrance, making it dangerous for other traffic and pedestrians. Campervans would make this situation worse, as they take up far more space. see attachments for more info

Prohibited sites

Entrance of Goldie Bush walkway Horseman Road, Waitākere, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? This is a sensitive area with limited parking facilities. This should be extended to cover equally sensitive areas, both cultural and environmental, at Te Henga/Bethells Beach. Te Henga/Bethells Beach is already oversubscribed by visitors and there is not enough parking as it is. Also there is a concern around enforcement; the parking rules are already ignored by visitors, causing danger to traffic and pedestrians. It is nigh impossible to get enforcement officers to come to Te Henga/Bethells, and I expect enforcement would be equally lax with freedom campers.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours

Is this because, in your view:

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain): Self-contained should mean vehicle having a separate area dedicated to ablutions within it, not just a goods & services style van with a portable toilet & water vessel tucked under the sleeping platform i.e proper campervan with a bathroom inside and built in tanks.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain)

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain)

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain): If you are going to make a specific time rule, have an app with barcode system (similar to covid app, where the campers scan in and it logs you into each place (date and time). Enforcement officers could then check via app data rather than personal interaction with campers unless required. If a camper scans the barcode to a place they have been before, it would advise them if they meet the time between requirements or they are not allowed back there again until date xyz.

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Another reason (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Who is going to police this and how are these people going to know the movements of all the vehicles unless they have a tracing app or the like?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Do not allow freedom camping at Piha beach either North or South. It will get so congested. Parking on a good day is hard to find let alone the parks clogged up by campervans and their wahsing drying all over the place.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. # Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be avail

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

I propose the following places be added to the prohibited list.

Lake Wainamu Car park and the adjacent Te Henga walkway carpark which fall under the Waitakere Ranges Heritage area - This area is under massive strain due to increased visitor numbers. We as a community are already having problems with bad parking in this area which has in the past impacted the flow of the traffic to the beach and on more than one occasion held up emergency vehicles.

We have had freedom campers park here in large vehicles and it has been a problem for access. The Wainamu carpark is also an important turning bay for large vehicles, for example it was used extensively as an area for large trucks to turn when the road just down from there was being repaired after it completely washed away in the August 2021 flood. Had campers been there at this time it would have caused issues. Also this area is a high fire risk being on black sand, the area becomes tinder dry in the summer months, we would not want people using open flame cooking devices in this area.

This car park is for access to lake Wainamu which is recognised as an outstanding natural feature in the unitary plan, but regardless has very little time or money put into its management and protection by Auckland Council. That being said, this suggests that Auckland council would have limited resources and motivation to manage freedom campers in this area and the management would yet again fall on local residents. Auckland Transport has numerous complaints re lack of access for residents and emergency vehicles due to poor parking and lack of management on file as evidence to support this.

I would also like the following places added due to most of the tracks in the Waitakere ranges being closed due to Kauri Dieback, travel being restricted due to Covid and massive subdivisions going in around West Auckland, these natural areas are already at breaking point and the council have given no evidence that they will support the management of freedom campers in these places already under strain:

Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road local park

Marine Parade North carparks on beachfront

Marine Parade South carparks on beachfront

Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road

Karekare Road Parking area at beach (partly road reserve)

Anawhata Road entrance to Rose Track and White Track

Anawhata Road northern end, end of road parking area

Te Henga Bethells Road northern end carpark at beach

French Bay French Bay Carparks

Little Huia Huia Road

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

In allowing overnight parking for freedom camp vehicles on the foreshore in our area of Piha, there is already signage advising "Not Suitable For Campervans". This is because of a narrow road access with low overhanging branches and limited parking space. The proposed new bylaw could result in a bottle neck of traffic trying to enter / exit.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Generally in our area of Piha the roads are narrow and thus single lane in some areas with limited carparks as things currently are. As mentioned already there is signage saying "Not Suitable For Campervans" on the road to the foreshore because of narrow access and overhanging trees. Encouraging campervans to stay for any period will result in blockages and traffic jams. Its bad enough already without campervans in the mix because Piha particularly is being featured as one of Auckland's prime beaches to go to for day-trippers. Eg: from publication "Lonely Planet" / "NZ Herald" and many other travel brochures etc.

There is a large area of Council camping ground which has recently stopped having permanents. Thus there is a much greater area available for campervans either self contained or not. With plenty of facilities and good access to the beachfront, this is the area that must be required for any camping vehicle to stay.

There should be no freedom camping in the Piha area. It should be a prohibited area for "Freedom Camping".

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, There are better ways to prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? - PIHA HAS A CAMPING GROUND BESIDE THE SEA AND IT SHOULD BE MADE MANDATORY FOR ALL CAMPERS TO USE THIS INSTEAD OF CLUTTERING UP THE AREA.

- A SECONDARY TEMPORARY PARKING AREA SHOULD BE THE PIHA DOMAIN, WITH A SMALL CHARGE MADE FOR OVERNIGHT STAYERS. IF THEY CANT AFFORD THAT, THEN STAY AWAY.

- THERE IS NO FINANCIAL ADVANTAGE FOR PIHA TO HOST THESE FREELoadERS ... IF THEY CAN PAY FOR VEHICLE EXPENSES, FUEL, ETC, THEY CAN AFFORD A SMALL CHARGE FOR PARKING. OTHERWISE THEY ARE HERE AT OUR EXPENSE.

Environment and Public Health and Safety:

1.- The nearest waste dump station is in Te Atatu, providing an incentive for campers to NOT use their toilets but use either the neighbouring area (sand dunes or bush areas as we have seen in other areas of NZ), or the few Piha public toilets, or empty their tanks on the roadside.

2.- The Piha public toilets are beside the beaches and have passive waste water systems. Any increase in their use will eventually result in overflow problems which could affect the beach. The Piha lagoon already suffers from high summer coli-form levels: this would be worsened.

3.- As per events in other parts of NZ campers will try to use the Camping Ground toilet, shower and water facilities which is not acceptable. (We have already had to design houses along the Piha waterfront where the owner doesn't want a front door because they are fed up with people asking to use their toilet.)

4.- South Piha operates on harvested rain water with no reticulated supply, so an increase in campers will quickly use our limited natural resource.

5.- There will be added pollution of extra vehicles travelling up and down Piha Road, with engine fumes, brake pad dust (asbestos?) affecting the nearby residents. It is already quite bad in the summer.

6.- Many travellers are unfamiliar with the Piha Road, which will lead to increased Fire Brigade call-outs to accidents. The Fire service men are local volunteers, so every call-out results in loss of time and income to many local workers. This impacts on our building progress, (as jobs stop when the alarm goes off) and availability of services when plumbers, builders, etc have to drop tools to attend.

7.- Piha has no Council Compliance Officers and no Police presence, so there can be no immediate response to noise complaints such as dogs, parties or running generators. There will be no policing of our no-alcohol policy which could lead to broken bottles and more litter on the beach.

8.- Any increase in medical emergencies will result in extra work for the Trust Rescue Helicopter service which operates on donations. There is no resident doctor in Piha.

9.- We locals already have to pick up the plastic and bottles on the beach, along with shitty nappies, dog turds, napkins, face masks. This will only get worse. (As an example take a look at how filthy the Nihoputu Falls carpark area is.)

10.- Visually, any beach visitor will see a line of vans with washing hanging out, people half dressed, furniture scattered round... visually polluting.

Public Access:

1.- The area round the Piha store is already congested and having more camping vehicles and people there will exacerbate the problem.

2.- With the proposed camping van parking extending the full length of the beach there will be less access for locals to launch their boats, less access onto the beach by emergency services and surf rescue crews. ( The surf rescue is a voluntary system and an increase in people mean extra work for our unpaid volunteers).

3.- All three eating venues (the Surf club, the RSA, the Cafe) are located in already congested areas and will only make things worse.

4.- The Piha Road is narrow and dangerous in places and many accidents are caused by ignorant or inexperienced drivers. Any major accident shuts Piha off from the city for everybody. On working days this is not acceptable.

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby? Under the proposal we can't because there will be no policing. It will be up to the locals to enforce the regulations, which can easily lead to confrontation and aggression.

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

1.- At present the Self Containment rules are farcical, with many station wagon type vehicles (and even utes) wearing the Self Containment sticker.

Government needs to tighten these rules, and the right to Self Containment should be decided by the Road Authorities, ie it should be an additional check made during the Warrant of Fitness examination (at an additional cost the owner of course).

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

In Piha, this is irrelevant as we have no authorities to police the rules. It seems as though Council will make a rule BUT the local people will be the ones forced to enforce these rules.

ALL FREEDOM CAMPING REGULATION SHOULD BE NATIONWIDE AND SET BY THE GOVERNMENT. WE DONT PAY TAXES FOR COUNCIL TO BOTHER WITH CAMPERS.

Waitākere Ranges Local Board area

Prohibited sites

Entrance of Goldie Bush walkway Horseman Road, Waitākere, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? We live in the Waitakeres World Heritage Park and as such, overnight parking should be strictly prohibited as per the Park guidelines.

There should be NO overnight parking in the car parks and laybys along Piha Road as the road is already quite dangerous.

Lopdell Hall and House 418 Titirangi Road, Titirangi, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? This is ridiculous as it is one of only a few car parks for the Titirangi shoppers. Parking is already a problem here and losing the Lopdell area will impact the main road thru Titirangi.

Sandys Parade, Laingholm Bay, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Again, narrow roads, small beaches, no infrastructure and intrusion on the locals make it obviously a no-go area.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Doesn't the Council have a commitment to provide more serviced areas. By relying on the Freedom Camping Act they are deferring their responsibility to provide suitable toilets and facilities such as Dump stations.

The problem is that the "Self Containment Certification" has become too lax. Self containment should have permanently fixed toilets that are unobstructed. The SC stickers should be changed regularly and should be printed with the vehicle registration, so they can not be copied or abused.

The vehicles that were professionally build as motorhomes and fully Sc with proper toilets etc are being tarred with the same brush as the abusers who have homemade kitouts and portable toilets.

Improving the issuing of SC stickers would solve a lot of the problems. I realise that is not a council issue but a government one but lobbying by the council would help solve the issue.

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? There is no need for freedom camping in the Waitakere ranges we have camping grounds for that. The risk or chance of damage is too great (fire and rubbish) and it's not like facilities to cater for this don't already exist. Living in the ranges comes with limits and responsibility which freedom campers are not always aligned to, freedom camping is simply not appropriate. Allowing freedom camping defeats the intention of WHRA. If council want to give more freedom camping space they could do so at council facilities/ car parks which are unused after hours. There is no place in Auckland that is not commutable so freedom camping in cbd or urban location (tarmac) is more appropriate and a better use of existing facilities not fully utilised

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard, It would be too hard t

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

I am writing to voice my deep concerns about the potential changes in the law that will allow Freedom Campers to camp in the Karekare Valley, specifically along Karekare Rd and in the beach parking lot. Plus, along Piha Road in the areas currently designated as pullouts for slower vehicles.

As you are aware, the traffic on Piha Rd is very heavy, and there are multiple accidents as a result of impatient drivers attempting to pass slower vehicles, and or folk driving too fast.

You must also be aware that Karekare Valley now has only one access road, which is Karekare Road. The integrity of the road surface is now in question with at least one area where the surface is no longer intact.

There is a height restriction on that road to boot. Despite signs indicating this, numerous vehicles attempt to drive down and are foiled by the tree and then have a nightmare scenario of backing up the road. I have witnessed a concrete truck and a moving van having to do this, and others have also witnessed folk in vehicles that will not fit under the tree having to back up, as the turning space is limited at best.

Coupled with that, the road is narrow and we as residents oftentimes take our lives in our hands as we drive up or down with visitors driving too fast and hogging the middle of the road. To then have the potential of even more traffic, including camper vans/tourists attempting to navigate the road is sheer idiocy. Since Lone Kauri was severely damaged during the most recent rains and subsequent flood and is now closed to through traffic, we have seen huge numbers of vehicles coming down Karekare Rd. This has been further impacted by the Covid restrictions in place in the greater Auckland region, and the public's inability to travel further afield for recreation.

On any given week day, the very small parking lot at the beach is oftentimes almost full by midday, and on some Fridays and the weekend if the weather is halfway decent, it is overflowing by mid-morning. The large number of vehicles sometimes crowd the access to the road to the surf club, which may be needed for emergency vehicles. Furthermore, there have been some weekends when cars are parked at least halfway up Karekare Road, ignoring the broken yellow lines which should indicate there is no parking allowed. This is a narrow road and vehicles should be driving slowly, but frequently they speed between the strategically placed narrow areas in the road and the speed bumps on the road. It is dangerous for all concerned who may be walking on the road. We have numerous young children living in the valley, and their welfare may be in question with the increase in traffic. Add even more parked traffic and one can anticipate the potential for injury.

The parking lot is very small and if the law allows campervans and their potential furniture, where will others park? Last Friday there was a huge campervan parked parallel to the barriers in the parking lot...took up at least 4 parking slots. On that Friday there were 25 cars in the parking lot and no other room aside from in the middle of the lot...and it was only 1130 in the morning when I observed this.

We also have issues with water supply, and I don't believe anyone wants freedom campers walking down to the surf club after hours and draining our water tank dry. That is tank water needed for surf club operations and in some cases for emergency uses in the first aid room. We cannot and should not be expected to cater to any freedom campers who are inconsiderate enough to come unprepared and thus wish to plunder our meagre resources.

McCready's paddock may well also become a stopping point for said Freedom Campers, even though this is not an area in which Freedom campers are allowed. There is no signage to indicate that this is not permitted. But as residents who live close to this area, what are we to do? We already have to deal with an influx of folk camping there during the summer, and unfortunately, some residents have had their homes burgled, and cars broken into, or tires slashed. Just last night we had to deal with a raucous group partying much of the night and in fact, keeping a fire burning all night. This was extremely disturbing to the locals who live close by. This morning we had to call the fire brigade to oust this uncooperative group. If campers are allowed in this area, where will the locals who may wish to go to the park to picnic go?

As residents we have been dealing with rubbish strewn across the landscape, including finding fecal matter in the stream in partially opened plastic bags, and disposable nappies on the beach in different areas. Quite aside from the rubbish from numerous face masks. These are ongoing issues due to the thoughtlessness of the general public. They obviously damage our fragile ecosystems and present real potential health hazards to those who are unintentionally exposed.

If ACC deems our valley is appropriate for Freedom Camping, then signage must be placed in very visible places both indicating where camping is NOT permitted, and a large and clear sign must be added to the junction of Piha Rd and Karekare Rd, noting the height restriction. As a community we have already paid for signage, which is clear to many of us, but obviously not to many visitors. Furthermore, I would strongly suggest that included in this law is a provision where all rental campervan agencies are required to provide a list of all areas that are permitted – a list ACC provides – so there can be no confusion.

Have you also considered what the consequences of illegal freedom camping could be?

I am not against anyone having the opportunity to travel and enjoy our beautiful countryside, but we must be wise in how we mandate this. Given those of us who live in the Waitakere Range have dealt with the fallout from the rahui for quite some years now, why on earth is ACC deeming it quite acceptable to introduce legislation that will be potentially of greater risk to our environment and to our peoples?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I don't know

Do you want to comment on why you don't know? Don't want freedom campers in the area at all - increases criminal activity in the area

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a longer no-return period means most campers are unlikely to visit an area more than once, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Piha is a very isolated community - how often are enforcement officers going to take the time to come out here and make sure the campers follow the rules? It will take away from local campsites as why pay when you can stay for free. It is not a good idea for this location.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain): At a minimum, freedom camping needs to be subject to stringent rules. The experience in our community has been noise, litter, and human excrement. A better idea is to not allow it at all.

From what I can gather, there is no restriction on freedom camping at Piha, where I live. This will be a disaster:

Carparking taken up, noise for residents, litter, sewage. We have already experienced this. I strongly ask that Piha beachfront be a prohibited zone for freedom camping.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, and council has not identified any serviced areas in this proposal

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a longer no-return period means most campers are unlikely to visit an area more than once, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

'These comments are specific to Piha, Karekare and Anawhata. Previously freedom camping was banned from all Piha's foreshore reserves, all parks, carparks and road ends. Freedom camping could only take place in designated places and of course for a small fee people could camp in vehicles at the end of Glen Esk Road, end of Log Race Road, McCreadies Paddock (Karekare) and Anawhata; or they can camp in Piha's Domain Campground.

Historically there have been ongoing issues with freedom camping in these areas. As a longtime local (Marine Parade North), I have personally been subject to abuse, dumping of rubbish, defecation etc. in front of our property from freedom campers.

The council in the past has been proactive to ensure Freedom campers have been prohibited along Marine Parade North for the below reasons after multiple complaints and it has benefited both residents, day-trippers and the protected environment we live in.

- Sand dunes are used as toilets (including during the hours public toilets are open and unlocked)
- Open fires are lit during fire season.
- Fireworks are set off year-round endangering protected species.
- Water is taken in large quantities from the toilet blocks.
- Noise goes on through the night along with drunken/drugged behaviour

Since Covid the beach is the busiest it has ever been, without a carpark to be seen, often even on a Friday night, this has only ever happened previously at the height of summer and on weekends. Freedom campers would seriously impact the ability for day-trippers to be able to get a park. We would propose all the below areas be designated prohibited areas for Freedom camping.

Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road local park

Marine Parade North carparks on beachfront

Marine Parade South carparks on beachfront

Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road

Karekare Road Parking area at beach (partly road reserve)

Anawhata Road entrance to Rose Track and White Track

Anawhata Road northern end, end of road parking area

Te Henga Bethells Road northern end carpark at beach

Bethells Road entrance to Lake Wainamu Track

French Bay French Bay Carparks

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Having been a freedoms camper myself this only works with if it is monitored by someone local to the area telling people to move on and the authority to issue fines otherwise we WILL cheat the rules. If it's monitored the word soon gets around at the change over 2nd day. People are always asking 'does someone check?' ... if the answer is yes we move on as per the rules. If no one is checking we stay. If unmonitored places close to Auckland will become a camp ground and this will cause conflict with the locals. Piha for example already seasonally has a out of control large amount of campers, vans and car camping all along the beach front. In the weekends parking a already barely adequate and if parking gets taken up with campers it will a highly problematic

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

It's fine to impose "general rules" but what really matters is how and if they are actually enforced at all. I can see it being very difficult to enforce these rules in a way that is fair to local people that have to deal with the vast negative repercussions of freedom camping being opened up like this. Please do not pass this by law.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

It would be a TRAGEDY for not only the local people living in Piha but the environment too if freedom camping is opened up in Piha. From personal experience I have seen the lack of respect and compassion for their surroundings that freedom campers have shown in Piha. From defecating in public spaces to leaving rubbish behind, there are NO positive outcomes from this by law.... Especially when there is already a perfectly good campground available here with the appropriate facilities!

And the current public infrastructure already struggles to cater to the amount of day trippers out here let alone the horde of semi-permanent freedom campers that will establish themselves here.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. There appears to be no space in this form to prohibit freedom campers anywhere on the roadside in Piha. WHY ARE THERE NO PROPOSED PROHIBITED AREAS IN PIHA?

The Council has clearly not see the parking chaos in Piha and Karekare on hot days, especially since we came into Level 3. There were so many people that some visitors were picnicking ON RESIDENTS' LAWNS.

For the sake of Piha's environment, the health of locals and to ensure accessibility for everyone, please ban freedom campers:

All the roadside beachfront carparks at Piha and North Piha (except for regional park carpark at far end N Piha Road)

Ends of Glen Esk, Log Race, Te Ahuahu, Garden and Anawhata Roads. Basically, anywhere the road ends informally, adjoining parkland.

Pull off areas at track entrances and on road sides.

Roadside at Claude Abel Reserve (Garden Road)

I fear we will be overrun with Freedom campers over the summer if we just let it all happen, open slather, and we already have parking issues. If you insist on opening it all up, HOW WILL YOU POLICE IT? Right now, it's our Camp Mother at the Piha Campground, Fiona, who takes care of things - and she's even losing business from this issue.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas

- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

Hi, I'm finding this feedback process difficult so this may be the wrong place for the following comments - I am a Piha resident and oppose the opening up of many of Piha's public spaces to freedom campers especially Garden Rd (Claude Abel reserve) and much of Marine Parade north. Freedom camping already happens with little or no enforcement - I see nothing in the proposal about increasing enforcement resources. Currently there are litter and noise problems. Many campers use the sand dunes as toilets etc. Camper vans park in Garden Rd making it very narrow at times. There are two existing campgrounds at Piha and Council should be supporting those facilities.

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain): Freedom camping vehicles should be certified - this should include plumbed (proper) toilet and shower. Currently campers only need to place a portable toilet in a car to be certified. This is a huge problem, as campers don't actually use the cheap loo!

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I have concerns about areas being left out of prohibited and restricted areas. E.g currently Piha Marine Parade N would currently be open under general rules with no limits. Likewise French Bay in Titirangi or Titirangi Beach. Would it be feasible to impose a maximum per site rule in general? E.g. no more than 5 campervans in one area? Also it might be useful to have an overview of all sites that general rules apply.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

I do not think the list of prohibited and restricted areas is thorough enough. Examples are Marine Parade N in Piha, French Bay, Titirangi Beach. In my opinion all these sites should be restricted to manage a good balance between safeguarding locals and opening freedom camping for all.

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay for an indefinite period in the same road or off-road parking area (no maximum stay rule)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles should be allowed to come back to stay in the same area after dumping their waste responsibly, it is not necessary to prevent their return through this rule, No maximum stay gives campers the best opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, Shorter stays are already the norm for most freedom campers, so a maximum stay rule is not necessary, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Accommodation is expensive and in short supply in Auckland. This allows people a place to stay if they can't find another place and two nights may not always suit how long they need to stay in Tamaki MaKaurau. Not everyone has the money for self containment or expensive accommodation. Council needs to provide decent places for them to shower, toilet and do washing up. This is done in places around NZ like Motueka and Nelson etc

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Most campers cannot afford self-containment. Council needs to add facilities here to make sure toilets, showers pay as you go are available here. Such as is done in Nelson by the city council and Motueka by Tasman District Council.

Albert-Eden Local Board area

Prohibited site

Heron Park 1625-1627 Great North Road, Waterview, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? No – freedom camping should be allowed subject to the general rules

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? This park is centrally located to many different motorways being near the Waterview tunnel. It is an area out of sight of locals mainly and off a busy four-lane arterial route. It is a perfect place for freedom campers to stay while they visit Auckland. It's also close to public transport should they wish to head into the city to visit the art gallery and waterfront.

Aotea/Great Barrier Local Board area

Prohibited sites

Blind Bay (parking area by wharf) Opposite 670 Blind Bay Road, Great Barrier Island, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? No – freedom camping should be allowed subject to the general rules

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? It's near the ferry terminal and thus easy access to visitors. There is very little accommodation on Great Barrier Island. Auckland Council must provide facilities for toilets, washing and beach bbqs

Goosebury Flat, Shoal Bay Opposite 418 Shoal Bay Road, Great Barrier Island, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? No – freedom camping should be allowed with area-specific restrictions

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Council needs to add facilities here to make sure toilets, showers pay as you go are available here. Such as is done in Nelson by the city council and Motueka by Tasman District Council.

Medlands Beach carpark Sandhills Road, Great Barrier Island, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? No – freedom camping should be allowed subject to the general rules

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Good spot near popular Medlands beach. Council needs to add facilities here to make sure toilets, showers pay as you go are available here. Such as is done in Nelson by the city council and Motueka by Tasman District Council.

Old Service Centre 75-81 Hector Sanderson Road, Great Barrier Island, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? No – freedom camping should be allowed subject to the general rules

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Close to services and shops that will benefit from freedom campers. Council needs to add facilities here to make sure toilets, showers pay as you go are available here. Such as is done in Nelson by the city council and Motueka by Tasman District Council.

Devonport-Takapuna Local Board area

Prohibited sites

Queens Parade, Devonport, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? No – freedom camping should be allowed subject to the general rules

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? There is nowhere else to stay and this is a popular place to visit with a number of sites of interest to tourists. Council needs to add facilities here to make sure toilets, showers pay as you go are available here. Such as is done in Nelson by the city council and Motueka by Tasman District Council.

Becroft Park Reserve 8A Becroft Drive, Forrest Hill, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? No – freedom camping should be allowed subject to the general rules

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? There are very few places to stay on North Shore and this is used mainly for sports and not in the evenings so would add another North Shore space for campers. Council needs to add facilities here to make sure toilets, showers pay as you go are available here. Such as is done in Nelson by the city council and Motueka by Tasman District Council.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas

Another reason (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): The bulk of the areas attractive to freedom campers are also attractive to day visitors and locals so multiple day stays are a selfish monopolisation of a limited resource and also increase the risk of expanding monopolisation - i.e spreading out ones camp site taking over more area. One nights stay puts freedom campers on an equal not privileged footing.

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

1) There should also be a limit to the number of freedom camping vehicles in an area and should also be an anti congregation rule so the monopolisation of areas is maintained - 3 or 4 large camper vans can monopolise an area that might enable up to 20 day visitors to enjoy the same amenity.

2) There should be size limits in remote coastal areas like Anawhata, Piha, Karekare, Bethels etc where narrow roads and limited areas mean large vehicle pose an undue risk to the community and road users - Limit should be 2 berth or 3.5 tonne max, in these areas. Should also apply to any areas accessed by narrow winding country roads

These comments are specific to Piha, Karekare and Anawhata. Previously freedom camping was banned from all Piha's foreshore reserves, all parks, carparks and road ends. Freedom camping could only take place in designated places and of course for a small fee people could camp in vehicles at the end of Glen Esk Road, end of Log Race Road, McCreadies Paddock (Karekare) and Anawhata; or they can camp in Piha's Domain Campground. Historically there have been ongoing issues with freedom camping in these areas. As a longtime local, I have personally seen dumping of rubbish, defecation etc. from freedom campers. The council in the past has been proactive to ensure Freedom campers have been prohibited along Marine Parade North for the below reasons after multiple complaints and it has benefited both residents, day-trippers and the protected environment we live in. - Sand dunes are used as toilets (including during the hours public toilets are open and unlocked) - Open fires are lit during fire season. - Fireworks are set off year-round endangering protected species. - Water is taken in large quantities from the toilet blocks. - Noise goes on through the night along with drunken/drugged behaviour Since Covid the beach is the busiest it has ever been, without a carpark to be seen, often even on a Friday night, this has only ever happened previously at the height of summer and on weekends. Freedom campers would seriously impact the ability for day-trippers to be able to get a park. We would propose all the below areas be designated prohibited areas for Freedom camping. Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road local park Marine Parade North carparks on beachfront Marine Parade South carparks on beachfront Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road Karekare Road Parking area at beach (partly road reserve) Anawhata Road entrance to Rose Track and White Track Anawhata Road northern end, end of road parking area Te Henga Bethells Road northern end carpark at beach Bethells Road entrance to Lake Wainamu Track French Bay French Bay Carparks Little Huia Huia Road

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 10am on the day of departure

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I am not happy with freedom campers being able to park on narrow side roads in Piha such as Glenesk Road in Piha. This is a popular walk for locals and visitors walking up to the end of the road to visit the falls. The road is narrow with large ditches on the side of it in many areas. I fear if campers were parking along this road it would cause significant inconvenience and a high risk of an accident happening.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

The list of areas in which freedom camping is prohibited should be extended to ensure the on-going protection of highly sensitive coastal areas. In particular I request that the area include Bethells Road from Tasman View Road to road end at Te Henga (Bethells Beach). Area of Concern: The area that this submission refers to is Bethells Road extending from Tasman View Road through the Coastal Settlement Zone adjacent to Te Henga Park to the road end at Te Henga (Bethells beach).

Action requested: Amendment of the bylaw to prohibit Freedom Camping along the Bethells Road from Tasman View Road to road end at Te Henga (Bethells Beach).

Justification: The proposed by-law does not place any limits on the number of vehicles that may occupy an area, nor the period within which camping may occur. Instead, it relies on the physical limitations for parking as the defacto moderator of scale and assumes only periodic use.

The Freedom Camping Act provides for a local authority to prohibit or restrict freedom camping to:

- 1) Protect an area
- 2) Protect access to the area.

Prohibition of freedom camping in the specified area is justified based on these conditions as outlined below.

1. To protect an area - the proposed by-law provides inadequate protection of the unique natural, landscape cultural, historic, and community features of the area.

The proposed bylaw relies on the physical limitations for parking as the defacto moderator of impacts due to scale and assumes only periodic use. Neither measure is realistic for the Te Henga (Bethells Beach) given:-

- (a) the lack of defined boundaries and barriers between existing reserves, private properties, and the road reserve and
- (b) the proximity of the area to the metropolitan area and the extremely high popularity of the area for locals and tourists.

Freedom Camping is currently not permitted in the Te Henga Park and it is presumed that this status will continue as per Council's notice that camping restrictions in parks will not be affected.

It has always been assumed that the park includes the roadside verge along Bethells Road which borders the reserve. Indeed, Council Rangers have previously acted to move along campers who were in breach of this. However, the boundary and status of the road reserve is unclear, as are the boundaries between residential properties and the road. This is in keeping with the low-density development of the coastal village. There are also no footpaths in this area to define the road area. Should the Bethells Road verge bordering the park be deemed roadside reserve, Freedom Camping will be permitted in this area.

Under the currently proposed bylaw, camperans could line both sides of Bethells road between the southern boundary of the park and the entrance to the carpark. Notwithstanding the potential encroachment onto private property, the density of Freedom Camping along this strip would be far greater than is currently allowed under residential development rules for the adjoining coastal village (based on a conservative estimate of parking, up to 15+ camper vans could be sited along an area of roadside bounded by less than 10 residential dwellings).

The effect would be equivalent to adding a row of high-density housing to the border between the coastal development and Te Henga Park.

To say that the current demand for Freedom Camping does not support this scenario is unreasonable because camping is currently not permitted and this status is informally managed by locals (with assistance of the Ranger as required).

To the contrary, it could reasonably be expected that allowing Freedom Camping would see a rapid and dramatic influx of campers within a very short period due to the wide-reaching impact of social media. Evidence for this can be seen in the huge rise in day-trippers to the Te Henga and Lake Wainamu areas which have become highly popularised on social media sites.

Te Henga (Bethells Beach) and its associated rural coastal settlement lie within the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area. The preamble to the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area Act (2008) recognises the special character of this area and provides for the built environment to be subservient to the natural environment and for the dark and quiet to be protected. While large numbers of day visitors visit the area, often exceeding parking capacity, night-time quiet and darkness is preserved by controls on residential development and non-residential activities. Such controls are outlined in the Local Area Plan (LAP) for Te Henga Bethells Beach and the Waitakere River Valley. Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area. (Adopted October 2015).

The Unitary Plan also includes provisions relating to residential development and non-residential . These are designed to ensure that these activities do not compromise the natural landscape historic and community features of the area. For example, See H2.3 Policies:-

- (1) Require minimum site sizes and limit the scale and intensity of development for un-serviced sites to ensure that:
- (b) development will be in keeping with any landscape qualities or natural features.
- (4) Require development to be of a height and bulk and have sufficient setbacks and open space to maintain and complement the rural and coastal built character of the area.
- (7) Enable non-residential activities that: (b) are in keeping with the scale and intensity of development anticipated within the zone; and (c.) avoid, remedy or mitigate adverse effects on residential amenity;

If residential development is constrained to protect the natural and amenity features of this area, then it follows that non-residential activities should also be managed to the same degree. Allowing freedom camping, constrained only by the physical limitations of parking, is inconsistent with the existing controls in place for this area. Highly predictable adverse effects would include increased night-time noise from human activities (including use of generators) and increased light pollution.

2). Protect access to the area – Freedom Camping will reduce access for day-time visitors at a ratio of up to 1:10.

Parking for day-trippers is now regularly reaching and exceeding capacity, with overflow resulting in dangerous and inconsiderate parking – the effects of which are damage to roadside plantings, narrowing of the road to one-lane in parts, loss of safe pedestrian access, and dangerous conditions for cyclists.

Allowing Te Henga Bethells Beach to become a destination for Freedom Camping would see an even further reduction of available parking for day-trippers and would deny a greater number of people access to this amenity. The ratio of campers to day-trippers could be as high as 1:10. For example, a moderately sized 2-berth camper van (2 person occupancy) parked for maximum stay of 2 nights and a morning would occupy at least 2 carparks/day. Assuming a turnover rate for day-tripper carparks of 2 cars/day, a single campervan could displace 4 day-tripper vehicles/day and up to 10 vehicles for the duration of stay – say a weekend.

Allowing 1 party to occupy space that then denies access to 10 others is unreasonable.

A “wait and see” approach to regulation is unjustified and inappropriate given the special status and sensitivity of this area.

A “wait and see” approach is not appropriate for the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area. In promulgation of the Act, the adverse effects from intensification activities have already been identified and deemed unacceptable. To now await and require proof of adverse effects is equivalent to revisiting the underlying purpose of the Act.

Notwithstanding this, and the requirement for campervans to be self-contained under the bylaw, issues frequently occur with the even small number of freedom campers that use the area albeit illegally. These include use of the roadside areas as lavatories, using public facilities for ablutions and laundry adding to water use, and discharging waste-tanks in the public walking areas. It is noted that there are no waste pump-out facilities within 25 kms of this community.

In Summary – amendment of the bylaw to prohibit Freedom Camping along Bethells Road from Tasman View Road to road end at Te Henga (Bethells Beach) is necessary and justified to protect the special character of the area while ensuring wide community access to the public spaces within Te Henga and the Waitakere Regional Park.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Please add French Bay to your restricted areas or make it one night only. This beach is already overwhelmed on sunny days with cars, boats and trailers, sailing and people. It is one of the very few boat ramps on the Northern Manukau and all-day camping will just make it too difficult for boaties to use this facility.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): Better consideration needs to be given to the location of freedom campers in Auckland. French bay should not be considered a location for freedom camping given the traffic congestion and risks associated with that. It is a busy road with no clear area for the campers. They are a hazard and health and safety risk.

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby? Bring clearer on the rules with camper providers and enabling fines to be applied immediately - not after 2 days

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

The French Bay/Otitori Bay waterfront experiences severe congestion at high tide on weekends in summer, making it difficult for residents to pass through and often restricting parking up both Otitori Rd and Valley Rd. Unrestricted Freedom Camping in this area will likely exacerbate this. There are also a number of vehicles which already use this area regularly to camp, including groups who pitch tents on the beach itself on occasion. There should be restrictions in place for this area to prevent both overcrowding and nuisance to residents in the area, as well as beach goers in general.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

As per the attached submission, the Karekare Ratepayers and Residents Trust request that Freedom Camping be prohibited at Karekare .

If that is not possible, then the Karekare Ratepayers and Residents Trust request that Freedom Camping at Karekare be restricted to weekdays only, between the hours of 5pm Monday to 9am Friday.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - The Karekare Ratepayers and Residents Trust is concerned at the effect of the proposed bylaw. Traffic - Karekare is served by two steep, narrow, winding roads, with tight bends and height restrictions.

One road is currently closed due to a slip that has taken out most of the roadway. Self-contained campervans can be quite large vehicles; in many sections of our roads, it would be difficult for two campervans to pass each other. The situation is even worse vis a vis the large rubbish and recycling collection vehicles which operate in Piha and Karekare on Mondays. Campervan drivers are often strangers to the area and ignore, or do not understand, height restriction road signs. This is particularly the case at Piha where limbs have been removed from pohutukawa trees in Beach Valley Road following strikes by campervans, and Karekare, where a highly valued pohutukawa tree extends at a low height over Karekare Road, close to the bottom of a steep hill. I have personally witnessed campervans getting stuck under this obstacle, and having to reverse back up the hill. Parking - As the attached cadastral map affirms, much of the Karekare Beach carpark and adjacent road verges are in the road reserve, thus would be available for campervan parking.

Generally, self-contained campervans are too big to fit into a single parking space, but parking is limited at the Karekare Beach carpark anyway. Currently, on weekends and holidays, the 'overflow' of parked vehicles extends along the roadway in both directions, often reducing traffic to a single lane for at least half a kilometer either side of the carpark. Adding self-contained campervans to the mix will inevitably lead to worse traffic jams and frayed tempers on weekends and holidays. In addition, flooding events have undercut the road verges in places, making parking unsafe for unwary drivers. Many of the pull-off areas on Piha Road and the Scenic Drive were put in for slow drivers to pull over, thereby avoiding long “tails” of traffic and dangerous overtaking maneuvers. Additional safety issues will arise if these are used for freedom camping.

NB: The situation has been exacerbated by the closing of Auckland’s borders due to Covid-19, which has greatly increased traffic to the West Coast beaches. Pedestrians - Pedestrians are particularly poorly-served at Karekare, being forced, in the main, to walk themselves, their children, prams and dogs, etc on the narrow roadway, which often lacks a verge. The small sections of footpath that do exist are poorly maintained, often overgrown and/or compromised by slips. Thus, parked campervans will only increase the risk to pedestrians. Environmental harm - Camping could take place in some of our most fragile eco-systems that are prone to damage and harm from rubbish, trampling, introduction of pests, spread of kauri dieback, and pet animals. People are currently discouraged from going off track, and many tracks are closed because of kauri dieback; they are also asked not to venture off accessways through dune areas because dune plants are fragile and birds nest on the ground, yet freedom camping could bring people into these areas. There is also a risk from campers lighting fires when our Ranges are highly prone to difficult-to-fight wildfires. Urbanisation - The Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area Act 2008 seeks to protect the natural values and wilderness of the Ranges. It also seeks for the built environment to be subservient to the natural environment and for the dark and quiet to be protected. While large numbers of day visitors visit the coast on summer holidays and weekends, at other times these places retain their remoteness and wilderness. Freedom camping will allow a built structure and domestic activities (watching TV, etc) to intrude into the wilderness, not just during the day time, but at night time, thus introducing noise and light into the heritage area environment. It is likely that word will get out through social media of places to freedom camp in the Waitakere Ranges. In other places, beachfronts have experienced a “wall” of campervans and it has been necessary to prohibit freedom camping on the beach front – eg. Sullivans Bay at Mahurangi. Health & safety - Although campervans would be required to be self-contained under the bylaw, campers using the dunes and bush as toilets has been a persistent issue. There are no public showers at Karekare, and no potable water at the carpark, but campers do use the public toilet hand basins to wash their clothes and dishes. Campervans may well also impede emergency vehicle access for road crashes / surf rescue / tramping search & rescue / medical events / suicides / fires, etc. Karekare also lies on the busy Hilary Trail, and at the terminus of two popular walking tracks that were amongst the first to reopen, after all the Waitakere Ranges tracks were closed due to kauri dieback. Access - Freedom camping over a several day period effectively privatises the space for the personal use of the campers, which can extend to tables and chairs and personal belongings taking up more space. West Coast beachfronts and carparks are at a premium for recreation for day-trip visitors from Auckland and further afield. Surfers also make great use of the carparks. It is normal for these to be full by mid-morning on weekends, public holidays, and over the summer holidays. Freedom camping will make it more difficult for day visitors to access the coast and tracks into parkland.

RECOMMENDATION

For all of the above reasons, the Karekare Ratepayers and Residents Trust request that Freedom Camping at Karekare be prohibited. If that is not possible, then the Karekare Ratepayers and Residents Trust request that Freedom Camping at Karekare

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

We have real concerns about possible freedom camping at the end of North Piha Road. The reason for this is that it is adjacent to areas that Blue Penguins still (despite the dogs) are trying to nest in the cliffs above the reserve. Some years ago the street light at this end was removed assist the penguins to safely travel to and from their nests.

Also the grassed edges at the end of this road already gets covered in vehicles, especially on busy summer days, and this causes traffic issues and leads to driveways being partly blocked. While there are rules in your proposal regarding freedom camping, who is going to police them? Many a night has been disturbed by rowdy campers partying with loud music - they are in holiday mode while the residents are trying to sleep.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

I am writing on behalf of French Bay Yacht Club Inc in Titirangi.

The club, which focuses on providing fun, affordable sailing opportunities for local people, is located next to the public boat ramp, which is one of only a few maintained and properly usable ramps on the northern side of the harbour. All of these boat ramps are under pressure from a wide range of users including trailered powerboats, jet skis, smaller fishing boats and in our case, sailing dinghies.

At French Bay the boat ramp is accessible for most boats around three hours either side of high tide.

That means for that time, especially on weekends, space to enter the area, prepare the boat, and then to park, is at a premium. We estimate that there are around 20 public (not club) boats per hour launching or retrieving at this peak time, not including club sailing dinghies.

It is well known that there is a shortage of boat ramps and boat facilities in Auckland. This is particularly true now with the borders closed, but has been noticed for some time.

The club is deeply concerned that the additional pressure freedom camping places on already strained car parking capacity and space will make the boat ramp, and also associated club activities, very problematic.

Currently, while there are some longer trailer parks both near the ramp and along the beach front, these are more often than not occupied by the public. Already this is forcing many trailer/car combinations up the narrow, windy residential streets including Valley Road, and the problematic Otitori Bay Road (due to gradient, narrowness and lack of parking space).

We recommend that the best way you can preserve continued public use of this ramp and also ensure the swimming beach is accessible and safe to the public, is to prohibit freedom camping at this beach.

FBYC is not against freedom camping in principle, but we recommend that there are a number of other beaches including neighbours Wood Bay and Titirangi Beach, that do not provide boating facilities, but which have toilets and are very suitable for freedom camping, and which will not compromise the public boating facilities or sailing club activities.

We acknowledge your two night restriction but we believe this beach will be very much in demand as it is one of the area's best swimming beaches, and that vehicles parked on the day in between will be problematic.

We have attached a photo taken last weekend of a typical scene at the boat ramp with boats and cars/trailers waiting to launch or be retrieved, and more cars waiting to enter the area around the corner. This is one that repeats itself over and over through the peak period around high tide on all fine weather weekend days. You'll note club sailing dinghies in the background too.

Thank you very much for considering our submission.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

These are all residential areas with limited parking, homes directly outside or next to areas where people could freedom camp. These three areas have the same/similar size, residential aspects etc to Laingholm where you have banned freedom camping! What is the difference between Laingholm and the above three other beaches - I suggest none.

- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a longer no-return period means most campers are unlikely to visit an area more than once, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I do not support broadening the freedom camping areas and consider that camping should be restricted to licensed campgrounds.

The risks of permitting wider freedom camping include:

- Increased likelihood of traffic accidents along narrow roadways due to pedestrians around larger vehicles on roadside verges.
- Damage to road shoulder areas due to vehicle traffic onto verges.
- Additional litter in areas where there are no regular rubbish services.
- Increased noise disturbance.
- Increased lighting in outside areas that currently enjoy darker skies.
- Possibility of fires being set outside designated fireplace facilities.
- Possible risk of vandalism.

- Degradation of scenic areas as vehicles are unpacked and belongings spread around vehicles.
- Occupation of scenic areas by larger groups degrading enjoyment by other members of the public.
- Lack of supervision and control due to inadequate ranger staffing.
- Risk of release or lack of control of animals potentially causing damage to local wildlife.
- Risk of increased predator (rat, mouse & stoat) activity near freedom camping areas as a result of increased availability of food residues and rubbish.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas

Sandys Parade, Laingholm Bay, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area?
No – freedom camping should be allowed with area specific restrictions

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Makes sense for Laingholm to have area specific restrictions (ie. limit of 3 freedom campers, perhaps 1 night stay, departure by 9am), but I am not sure why Laingholm is the only beach in this area that is prohibited; by prohibiting Laingholm, other beaches will have more freedom campers. Laingholm is a much larger beach than French Bay.

French Bay should either be prohibited or restricted, as this is a small bay with very limited parking, and it is very popular with local families (from Titirangi and neighbouring suburbs such as New Lynn, Green Bay, Glen Eden, Kelston) -- it is the only beach in the area that is swimmable. At weekends the road is crowded and all the parks are full; there is very limited off-street parking on surrounding streets, and those streets are very narrow and windy. It is dangerous for young families to have to park on Otitori Bay Road; if cars are parked on both sides of Valley Road, the road is blocked to residents. My preference for French Bay would be that it is prohibited for freedom camping, or perhaps prohibited over the summer months when the beach is most popular. And I believe it should at least be restricted to maximum 3 freedom campers year round, as it is always a popular place for locals to picnic, walk with friends, or sit in cars looking at the view.

If it becomes known among freedom campers that freedom camping at French Bay is unrestricted, I can see the carparks becoming completely filled with freedom campers.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): How are the rules going to be monitored? Who is there to monitor them?

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): Who is going to monitor this? Is it just going to be left to good faith? By the time campers have spread out with table and chairs, taking over another carpark - that are very limited - why are they suddenly going to depart after 2 days if nobody is there

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain)

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain): Again, same as above. This is wishful thinking and who is telling them their 2 days is up and its time to go, its 9am!!

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

There is no common sense to this. Already at the South Marine Parade carpark, it is heavily used with nightmare traffic build up, illegal parking, parking on dunes, road rage and residents struggling to get out of their properties. If you add camper vans to the mix it is going to be an enormous problem with day trippers and locals alike. The access to the beach gets blocked at the end of the round about, which is supposed to be kept clear to allow for emergency vehicles and fishing boats. Phone calls to AT to report traffic problems fall on deaf ears and are simply logged. It is literally a bun fight. Phone calls to Noise Control about rowdy people staying in their vans and cars in the carpark also fall on deaf ears, so if we had a camper van of troublesome people parked up for 2 nights, I'm assuming we'd have to suck it up - going by past experience.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

At North and South Piha we have a lovely lot of dotterel that are fiercely protected and I would be alarmed at increased parking of campers in this area.

Another concern with the campers possibly staying on longer is there is no dump waste station. Who is monitoring the length of stay of these people.

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? As a resident of Piha, I am speaking specifically from a Piha/Waitakere perspective - by banning freedom camping from

- Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road, local park
- Marine Parade North, car parks on beachfront
- Marine Parade South, car parks on beachfront
- Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road
- Karekare Road, Parking area at beach (partly road reserve)
- Anawhata Road, entrance to Rose Track and White Track
- Anawhata Road, northern end, end of road parking area

- Little Huia, Huia Road

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? As a resident of Piha, I am speaking specifically from a Piha/Waitakere perspective. It will unfairly prioritise freedom campers over every other all other users of the public amenities there. It will prevent surfers and watersports enthusiasts from accessing the already limited carparks available, it will make it dangerous for other road users by the size of the vehicles on the narrow roads in and around Piha. The Ranges contain ample informal and more formal camping places to meet the demand for camping. In the regional parkland, campervans can stay for a small fee at eight places in the Waitakeres: Arataki, Karamatura, Cascades Kauri, Cornwallis, Anawhata (Craw), Glen Esk, Whatipu and Log Race Road. There are also other tenting facilities. There is also a major campground on Piha Domain that is run under lease.

By extending freedom camping, the viability of these existing campgrounds is undermined. At Piha Domain, the campground has been reduced in size by flooding. Council has required the area available for camping to be reduced. Allowing freedom camping for two nights in all the carparks on the beachfront will have a major impact on the viability of the very long-standing and valued Piha Campground which currently provides access to the beaches and parks to a wide range of visitors. Specifically in Marine Parade South (1 - 13) and where it merges into Beach Valley Road, it will effect all residents there through additional noise in the evenings when we currently get some respite from day visitors, it will mean more shit to stand in in the verges, dunes and tracks as despite vehicles having a "self contained" sticker on the vehicle, it is either a lie or some do not wish to clean the septic tanks they have, particularly if it is a rental. It will mean more light pollution in the evenings when it should be a darksky zone. It will mean more pollution full stop added to the already scant rubbish bins that continually overflow.

Part 4: Enforcement powers, offences and penalties. Currently dogs are banned from the majority of Piha beaches, certainly fully from Piha Beach itself, on any given sunny day you will spot dozens of them running off lead all over the place. Rangers are invariably never seen to enforce this rule, likewise we receive just a sympathetic ear but no action when we report issues to noise control. Alcohol bans are also in place all along the beachfront and on the beach but these are never enforced. What confidence can we have that any freedom camper rules will be enforced by council? Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Freedom camping should be prohibited throughout the Waitakere Ranges and fringe areas

I wish to submit on the Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw, particularly in relation to the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area, and the Piha surrounds.

I am a resident of Piha, have what would be deemed a medium/large campervan myself, and am a member of the NZMCA.

It is an inconceivably bad and ill thought out idea to propose most of Piha open slather to freedom camping.

As I understand the council can prohibit or restrict freedom camping –

1. To protect an area
2. To protect the health and safety of people who visit the area
3. To protect access to the area.

I'd like to comment on all of these.

1. To protect an area

Camping will take place in some of our most fragile eco-systems that are prone to damage and harm from rubbish, trampling, introduction of pests, spread of kauri dieback, and domesticated animals, particularly dogs. Dogs specifically are already banned from Piha beach on or off leash and freedom camping will just bring more dogs. This season is not the first to see dead korora and seals on this stretch of the beach that have definitely been worried by dogs. As I have seen a dog ranger out there once in the last 10 years, I have no faith that the policing of this will be any better than it currently is, particularly as there will be no extra revenue coming in to council from this proposed bylaw.

People are currently discouraged from going off track and many tracks are closed because of kauri dieback; they are also asked not to go off accessways through dune areas because dune plants are fragile and birds nest on the ground, however, freedom camping will bring more people into these areas.

There is a risk from campers lighting fires when our Ranges are highly prone to difficult-to-fight wildfires. I know of the severity of these having seen the glow of the fires in May 2017 just south of our property in Marine Parade South. Waking up to ash over your vehicles and window sills is not to be forgotten.

Campervans can also be large vehicles that do not "fit" within some of our rural and coastal roads. Drivers are often strangers to the area and ignore or do not understand height restriction road signs. This is particularly the case at Piha where limbs have been removed from pohutukawa in Beach Valley Road following strikes by campervans, and Karekare, where a highly valued pohutukawa extends at a low height over Karekare Road, the entrance to the beach.

The Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area Act 2008 seeks to protect the natural values and wilderness of the Ranges. It also seeks for the built environment to be subservient to the natural environment and for the dark and quiet to be protected. While large numbers of day visitors visit the coast on summer holidays and weekends, at other times these places retain their remoteness and wilderness.

Freedom camping will allow a built structure and domestic activities (watching TV etc) to intrude into the wilderness, not just during the day, but at night time, thus introducing noise and light into the heritage area environment.

2. To protect the health and safety of people who visit the area

Although campervans would be required to be self-contained under the bylaw, campers using the dunes and bush as lavatories has been a persistent issue throughout Piha. This is not helped by the fact that the nearest dump site for camper toilets/greywater is around 30km & 45 minutes away in Henderson. Campers also use showers in changing sheds to wash and use hand basins to wash clothes and dishes which is not only unhygienic but also reduces the water supply available to other legitimate users of the Waitakeres.

The whole of the Piha waterfront and edging roads currently have an alcohol ban which will clearly go unenforced or ignored if freedom camping is allowed unfettered in the area. This provides a health and safety issue for the residents of the area, as we already frequently have to go out and deal with noise issues, alone and by ourselves, as because of our isolation we inevitably get nowhere trying to get noise control to come out. Just two weeks ago our neighbour had to deal with a noise issue at 2:30am from drunken revellers. Broken glass is not uncommon and we regularly have to do a sweep of the road front along Marine Parade South to make sure it is clear and free of debris. I am not calling all freedom campers drunkards, but freedom camping would certainly make this issue worse.

There are also health & safety issues related to the use of the road corridor in the Ranges. Some of the road pull-off areas on Piha Road and the Scenic Drive function as places where slow drivers can pull over. Safety issues will arise if these are used for freedom camping. All along the south end of Marine Parade South, the road is very narrow and if camper vans are parked along this road (west side of road) their doors must face the street as their doors will struggle to open on the beach side the way the topography is. This will clearly be a danger to them and other road users as they step out of their vehicle. The size of the vehicles is also going to block visual awareness of the many little kiddies that live on this street and visit, moving from the beach to vehicles or houses along the street.

At the end of Marine Parade South, there is a roundabout that all traffic must traverse once they come into the street. Beyond the roundabout is a key access gate onto the beach that provides access for rescue services and the local fishing club. As the photos below show, it is already an absolute bunfight to try and get around this roundabout on any given sunny Auckland day. Despite yellow lines and signage, people park freely all around the edges of it, on top of the small island in the centre of it, and on the dunes around it. You will observe cars trying to do 10 point turns to traverse the roundabout when it is like this, and/or backing down the road or into/onto residents driveways and into their fences. Having camper vans able to come down here freely will be a recipe for absolute chaos – they will not be able to get out of the street.

These photos relate to both Health & Safety, and also Access.

A camper van would not be able to get around this roundabout

A camper van would struggle to get past these vehicles and around the roundabout.

These will be prime spots for Freedom campers, and any large vehicles will stick well out into the middle of the road causing vehicular chaos and definite H&S issues through road rage.

Normal cars parking across the emergency/fishing club beach access despite clear and obvious NO PARKING signs – Freedom campers do not think any differently

3. To protect access to the area.

Freedom camping over a several day period effectively privatises the space for the personal use of the campers, which can extend to tables and chairs and personal belongings taking up more space.

At Piha and other places, beachfronts and parks are at a premium for recreation for day-trip visitors from Auckland and further afield – fishing enthusiasts, trampers, picnickers and families. Surfers also make enormous use of the carparks. It is obvious from the pictures preceding that this are overflowing on weekends, public holidays and during the summer period.

Freedom camping will make it more difficult for all day visitors to access the coast and tracks into parkland as the prime spots will end up permanently full from Freedom campers.

While I think that the whole of the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area should be free from all freedom camping because there are numerous designated and reasonably priced campgrounds around to choose from that are set up well, I fully agree with the local board that the following areas should have freedom camping prohibited –

- Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road, local park
- Marine Parade North, carparks on beachfront
- Marine Parade South, carparks on beachfront
- Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road
- Karekare Road, Parking area at beach (partly road reserve)
- Anawhata Road, entrance to Rose Track and White Track
- Anawhata Road, northern end, end of road parking area
- Te Henga Bethells Road, northern end carpark at beach
- Bethells Road, entrance to Lake Wainamu Track
- French Bay, French Bay carparks
- Little Huia, Huia Road

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): I do not believe they should be able to stay at all on road or off-road parking areas.

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

I am generally against Freedom Camping being allowed in Piha. We have 100's of people travelling here for day trips and the carparks and roads are always packed. If we add Freedom Campers into the mix we are going to have major issues for the Residents. We have a Camp Ground and I do not see why this is not enough to offer people. The Roads are narrow and extra traffic will make them more dangerous.

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

I would like to nominate the Karekare Valley which includes the Beach Carpark and grassed areas be named as a prohibited area for freedom camping.

The reasons are.

The existing carpark areas are under pressure. Recent upgrades of the toilets have taken away existing carparks on the grassed area. This has put increased pressure on the surrounding environment. Cars are forced to park on a narrow roadside. Pedestrians are forced to walk around parked cars because there are no footpaths provided in the valley. The road is becoming a very congested space. This is a safety issue

Recent floods have made roadside areas for parking unsafe with grass banks being undercut. This is a safety issue.

No clean water source is provided at the carpark except the hand basins in the toilets. Campers should be self-contained however it has been observed that the hand basins are used by campers to wash clothes and utensils etc. This is a health issue.

No rubbish bins are provided at the carpark. It will be left to the residents to clean up any rubbish left behind. Council cleaners service the toilet area but do not remove rubbish from the surrounding bushes. This is a health issue.

The two-night stay reduces the capacity of the car park for day trippers using the beach.

The carpark is close to private houses, so residents have ongoing concerns with noise from campers.

There is camping facilities at McCreddie's Paddock as you come into the Karekare Valley, which has clean water and toilet facilities provided. This could be better utilised by freedom campers.

In general, slow traffic bays along the Piha Road should not be used by free campers. They are designed to allow slow vehicles to pull over so traffic can pass. Having camper vans parked up in any slow bays should be prohibited as they present as a hazard.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I don't know

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I do not support having a change to the bylaw so that camping is allowed unless prohibited or restricted. I believe that the current structure, whereby camping areas are designated is a much better way to protect the environment, and also to ensure that freedom camping does not take over public spaces. Freedom camping is having an increasingly negative effect on New Zealand's environment due to the increasing volume of freedom campers – some of whom create litter problems, dispose of human waste inadequately and discharge grey water outside of dump stations. This issue is still applicable to those who are in certified self contained vehicles. Many people prefer to dispose of waste outside of their vehicle, and use public facilities in preference of their own self-contained facilities, as this makes staying in their own vehicles more pleasant and creates less waste that they need to empty from their vehicle. It seems illogical that at a time when Parliamentary Commissioner for the Environment, Simon Upton, is urging the Government to take advantage of the pause in international tourism to transform the sector to one with a substantially smaller environmental footprint that the Auckland Council is changing the bylaw to one that allows a greater proliferation of freedom camping, and therefore allows for more environmental degradation.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

During the COVID lockdowns we have seen an increase in daytripping to these pristine areas. While it is wonderful to see Aucklanders getting out and enjoying the region, it comes with a negative effect to the environment. We have seen a huge increase in littering, dumping of takeaway and food waste, bonfires, human waste and more. With more people comes more waste and damage that requires management.

I support freedom camping, but only in designated areas where there is adequate infrastructure, and where resource is directed to manage the sites. I do not think there should be widespread freedom camping as this will be of a scope that can not be managed without great cost to the ratepayer.

Therefore I believe that free camping should also incur a cost, given that even so called self-contained vehicles create environmental damage, and degradation.

As New Zealand prepares for a resurgence of international tourism, now is the time to think carefully about how we will manage tourism going forward in a way that ensures that our beautiful natural taonga are preserved for future generations to enjoy.

Simon Upton's report has suggested that "Tourists, and tourism businesses, should pay for the cost of the services they use and the environmental impairment they impose." I believe this must be applied in this instance in order to limit the damage and cover the cost of the resulting damage that will undoubtedly occur. To not do so is to open our region to greater damage, and lay the burden of the cost of mitigating this at the feet of Aucklanders.

It is our responsibility to consider the future cost to the natural environment that are the consequences of such a change to our bylaws.

Sandys Parade, Laingholm Bay, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area?

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? These areas prohibited within the Waitakere Ranges are woefully insufficient. As previously stated I do not support the change to the structure of the bylaw and believe that the current structure (whereby freedom camping is not permitted except at certain locations) is much more effective in protecting the environment. However, if this bylaw is changed then the list of prohibited areas must be increased. I can only comment on the area that I know well, and that is the Waitakere Ranges. (The lists for other areas should also be increased, but I do not have indepth knowledge to comment on these areas). The areas that I believe need protection for environmental degradation are as follows:

Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road local park

Marine Parade North carparks on beachfront

Marine Parade South carparks on beachfront

Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road

Te Ahuahu Road Road Reserve bordering parkland

Entrance to tracks along the Piha Road.

Potentially others, and these should be discussed with the local park management as they are the ones who have the indepth knowledge of the effect of camping in these fragile areas.

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): In my experience, freedom campers have been unanimously respectful and responsible. However I realize that those who have not personally experienced it will have different views, and I think having general rules is a way to avoid those that have a negative bias against freedom camping from arguing that it is unfettered. Personally I have found that day trippers are much more disrespectful of the land/ community they are visiting, leaving takeaway rubbish, nappies, etc, and I have found there to be a bit of confusion from locals about this issue (ie blaming freedom campers for rubbish as they are visible and day trippers have come and gone).

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Living out on the west coast beaches I have seen an unsurprising increase of visitors over lockdown. I am a little concerned that if places like Karekare, Te Henga, and Piha do not have designated freedom camping zones that there could be issues that may lead the residents to call for a complete prohibition of it. While travelling throughout New Zealand I have experienced other councils rules, and found that the spots that specifically set aside an area that was out of the way of normal day trippers to be the best solution. This allowed for a set amount of campers at a time, ensuring individuals utilizing them weren't cramped into a small space which kills the whole allure of freedom camping. It also meant that they aren't taking up spots in the main car parks.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard, It would be too hard to enforce the self-containment rule without referencing the National Standard

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra rest

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrict

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I do not agree with opening up all car parks and pull over areas at popular beaches such as Piha. I strongly encourage council to designate certain carparks, back from the beach and not those that are highly sought after by day visitors to the beach. A reduced amount of parking will make it more feasible for council to monitor compliance with the rules while maintaining a good quantum of car parks in close proximity to the beach available to day visitors to popular beaches. My personal experience in the past, is that freedom campers will stake-out areas close to the beach for many days on end knowing that monitoring of such camping is not effectively and consistently controlled by council. My personal experience is that freedom campers will spread their occupancy footprint across a wide area around their parked vehicle, with dish washing, laundry cleaning, and dining often making it unpleasant for visitors and residents alike. I have regularly witnessed freedom campers washing their dishes, clothes, teeth and themselves in toilet blocks, as well as defecating in the sand dunes and bush areas after public have closed.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

My comments and concerns relate specifically to popular locations, particularly beach locations. In my opinion the entire foreshore area along Piha and North Piha has benefited environmentally, and with improved public amenity and enjoyment for all users, since council prohibited freedom camping along these areas. The domain campground and designation of freedom camping areas back from the beach, as is currently allowed for in the existing bylaw, has provided for freedom camping as well as improved access and amenity for all day visitors and residents. Freedom campers are able to stay overnight (back from the beach) and like any other visitor, seek a beachside carpark during the day. In my experience this continues to work well for all.

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): The general rules are unlikely to be properly enforced in all areas - particularly further from central Auckland. Specific rules need to be made for each area proposed and enforcement mechanisms put in place to enable local residents to notify Council of breaches. The rules for any particular area need to be clearly signposted to users so that there can't be any misunderstandings between freedom campers and local residents.

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

The general rules need to apply to the restricted areas and any existing agreed areas. They are insufficient for areas where there are high volumes of visitors and/or areas where there are residential houses nearby. In areas far from central Auckland, without local police presence, they are insufficient to control antisocial behavior and disrespect for the local environment.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

The enforcement of the Bylaw is likely to be difficult in areas far from central Auckland. I suspect in these areas the Bylaw will not be proactively enforced, and instead will rely on local residents to inform Council of breaches. This is unsatisfactory and will cause distress for local residents when the Bylaws are breached or the freedom campers disrespect the privilege they are enjoying.

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas

Another reason (please explain): The rules will address the concerns of residents who believe they will be inundated with freedom campers.

They will prevent people staying long term in one place and give Auckland Council the ability to move people on.

Self containment is supported as it will prevent people sleeping in cars without any facilities potentially resulting in antisocial behavior (littering and toileting).

Self contained vehicles have all the facilities required on board for washing, toileting and eating and will not result in antisocial behaviour.

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, Shorter stays are already the norm for most freedom campers, so a stricter rule is not necessary, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 10am on the day of departure

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

The general rules would be easy to understand and administer. If rules are too complex and are different in different areas, this makes it more likely that people will be confused and break the rules. Keeping the rules as simple and easy to follow as possible will be the key.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Information on any restricted areas should be readily available on the Auckland Council website or other platforms so that freedom campers can easily understand where they can and cannot park and any restricted areas. This is necessary so that it is easy to follow the rules.

A permissive by-law with specific restrictions is easier to understand than one that has lots of restrictions in different areas.

Permitting freedom campers to use any street (not specifically prohibited or restricted), would not result in all residential streets being parked up, as is claimed by some campaigners. Genuine freedom campers usually visit an areas for a specific purpose, such as site seeing and seek to find pleasant areas to stay that are accessible to their trip purpose. Parking on random residential streets in the suburbs would be illogical.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas

Another reason (please explain): Whatever the rules, they MUST be consistent across Auckland.

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Please find herewith our submission with regard to:

Proposed Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw

Introduction

This submission speaks to the Proposed Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw consultation documents and maps provided on the AC website.

- The submitter’s interest is in the areas within the greater Piha community area, the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area and the Waitakere Ranges Regional Park.
- The submitter seeks to ensure that the various actions proposed by Auckland Council with regard to establishing a bylaw that conforms with the requirements of the Freedom Camping Act 2011, also conforms with and respects the covenants embodied in the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area Act 2008 and the Regional parks Management Plan 2010.

Background

The Submitter is an incorporated body that has been actively representing the Piha community 1939. Members include property owners, business owners, permanent residents, holiday and weekend dwellers and property tenants. The Submitter has an active membership who are necessarily affected by actions and activities of Freedom Campers that impinge upon the quiet enjoyment of their lifestyle and environment. The Submitter has an informative website, a Facebook page, a weekly newsletter to members and published the Piha Community News on a quarterly basis.

Issues

1) General rules for freedom camping

- a) Self Containment: Freedom Campers avoid using their Self Contained toilet facilities, preferring to “go in the bushes” or use public facilities in preference to the smell and disposal issues related to their self containment facility. The Bylaw will not prevent that, nor can it be readily enforced.
- b) Environmental Impact: The Freedom Camping Act 2011 does not allow campers to “leave rubbish, leave human waste, damage the area or the environment.” Due to Piha’s geographic location, enforcement of these requirements is impractical.

- i) Although currently prohibited, freedom camping at Piha already creates problems in our community with health, hygiene and safety for our children, community members and visitors. Enforcement of the current prohibition at Piha by Auckland Council is non-existent.

2) Specific Areas where Freedom Camping will be prohibited or restricted.

a) Designated Restricted and Prohibited Areas.

- i) There are currently only three restricted or prohibited area proposed within the Waitakere Heritage Area and the Waitakere Regional Park.
- ii) There is provision for camping by campervans within Regional Parks and at the Piha campground so it is not necessary to provide further sites.
- iii) The Reserves Act 1977 does not “permit any camping on a reserve unless an exception under that Act applies.”
- iv) Parkland and parking at Piha is already at capacity with people from Auckland, plus national and international visitors, with overflowing rubbish bins, no recycling facilities.
- v) As the proposal stands, freedom campers could legally move to a different road within the Piha community every second day, thereby effectively freedom camping permanently at Piha.
- vi) Lack of parking facilities already causes congestion, people park across driveways blocking residents from access their properties and indiscriminate parking closes off access to emergency vehicle such as fire trucks and ambulances. Allowing freedom camping at Piha will further exacerbate this problem.

b) Prohibition and Restriction of freedom camping at Piha

i) We ask that freedom camping be prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the Piha, Karekare and Anawhata areas, that is, all roads from the intersection of Piha Road with Scenic Drive.

ii) We ask that the following specific areas be designated prohibited for freedom camping:

- (1) Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road (Local Park.)
- (2) Marine Parade North and North Piha Road car parking areas.
- (3) Marine Parade South car parking areas on the beachfront.
- (4) Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark.

New Bylaw and Enforcement

The need for a new Bylaw is self-evident and we support that initiative. Enforcement is the most important facet of the Bylaw and when related to the Piha community area, the geographic separation of Piha from the seat of the Law enforcement agencies make anything except total prohibition of Freedom Camping impractical.

Other Areas of Concern

Although presently prohibited, Freedom Camping is frequently observed at Steadfast Park, in the parking area at the end of Glen Esk Road that serves the Kite Kite Falls track and at the Heritage Site (Old Radar Station) at the end of Te Ahuahu Road/Lograce Road. Serious consideration of Freedom Camping prohibition should be afforded these areas.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas

- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

As I understand this difficult read, only 3 places in the whole of the Waitakere Ranges are prohibited areas. What a nightmare.

Talking just about Piha..... The infrastructure is insufficient for the huge numbers of visitors already, and it is hard to find a car park for day trippers on any given weekend. If the Council really wants to force Freedom Camping on Piha then I think that there should be a couple of designated areas for freedom camping, not the whole of Piha. Not everyone has a van to stay in, they just want to come for the day and then have to go home.

How will you police it effectively? Time after time I watch the security guard permit people to stay on reserves overnight. They don't have a timeframe for talking to people, they're on a mission to get in and out of Piha/Karekare as quickly as possible. When tourism starts again and 6 vehicles roll in and set up an encampment at 10pm lighting a fire and starting a party who will sort that out? Our volunteer Fire Brigade?

#1486

I'm not objecting because I manage your campground. There will always be enough people who want the safety of the Campground and access to bathrooms 24hrs. I don't think this would have much of an impact on what is left of the business post COVID. For some families and a lot of folk having some freedom camping around the place will be a Godsend as camping grounds aren't cheap anymore. People who respect the environment are always welcome in our Community.

Freedom Camping is dangerous on a number of fronts, people get robbed, people get shot, women get raped. People at Piha drown.

People mostly don't read signs.

Will there be any opportunity to speak to this submission?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

I am 75 years old

Being in the tourism industry in the 1990s I have seen a lot of changes.

Not all Good.

Emphasis should be on tourists that spend more money, Freedom Campers and Backpackers will come and are here anyway.

Reading this you will have sitting around your table people that all will have one thing in common.

Looking after their own patch.

There will be no one who these decisions directly affect.

Local Board members do not speak for those affected.

We live in Snells Beach in a small street of seven houses. At the end there is a small car park, children's playground and toilets with a boat ramp.

We live three houses up from this car park.

In the almost eight years we have lived here there has never been an infringement notice given to a Freedom Camper no matter what they do!

Even after hundreds of complaints.

We occasionally see an enforcement officer now since the Auckland Council had a round table just like you are going to do but always between 11.00am and 2 pm.

Meanwhile camper rental hire and the NZMCA and the other usual suspects clip the ticket leaving people like us ratepayers and taxpayers to pay their costs.

This must be one of the few countries in the world where an undesirable man can park in a van with a bed in the back outside children's playground and toilets and take 3 weeks to get him moved.

That happened to us last December.

Parking Bylaws does not apply to them nor Liquor, Noise, Dog, and Litter Bylaws. They are a much protected group.

Auckland Super City Councils Freedom camping bylaws at the moment gives 165% more Freedom camping parks in our small carpark than ALL of Waitakere City!

We have 5 Freedom camping sights (often with 10 or more campers there.)

Waitakere has 3 Freedom campers' parks up where the old dump used to be.

(I lived in Swanson area for 40 years)

Waitakere is 10,000 hectares with 3 car parks

Sunburst Avenue car park 0.10111714 of a hectare with 5 car parks?

Waitakere is 98,842.2 times bigger.

Who allocated this (unfair) distribution of Freedom Camper sites in the Auckland Council area?

Waitakere Resident

Penelope Anne Hulse Deputy Mayor of Auckland at the time

Waitakere Resident

Raymond Tau Henare

represented three different political parties in parliament—New Zealand First, Mauri Pacific and the National Party

Waitakere Resident

Linda Cooper

Waitakere Ward Councillor

And the very wealthy and powerful lobby group

NZMCA.....The New Zealand Motor Caravan Association.

A total ban on Freedom Campervan parks is illegal under the 2011 act in Waitakere or anywhere.

To allocate 3 parks for a City of 100,000 hectares is not.

To allocate 165% more car parks in a small suburban side street in Snells Beach is not.

Apparently there was a vote on the amount of parks for Freedom Campers in different areas, which brings to mind.

"It's not the people who vote that count; it's the people who count the votes."

Local Rodney Board had input.

You will no doubt be seeing Audio visual presentations of sparkling Camper Vans with pristine toilets.

What you do not see is the facts that if the renter brings it back with the toilet seal not broken (Unused) he will get a $50.00 rebate.

This time will you:

- 1) Enforce the laws you make.... because all bylaws made by Auckland City Council are not enforced
- 2) Make it no parking areas for camper vans close to Children's playgrounds and Schools.

A common excuse is they are parked, not overnight camping.

This is a very common excuse which works.

Especially when the rarely seen enforcement officer always arrives between 11am – 2pm

- 3) Leave the enforcement of the laws to professional security companies.

Who is going to lose out by enforcement of these laws?

Only the law breakers.

Why are these lawbreakers protected?

It makes no sense?

But it makes sense to the decision makers.

Since my involvement with Freedom Camping in Auckland 2015 several things have been made very clear to me.

- 1) NZMCA calls the shorts on Freedom Camping bylaws in Auckland Council.
- 2) NZMCA wants freedom camping in all streets in all Auckland (I cannot believe that their Waitakere comrades will agree, but that will be sorted like last time.)

(No restricted Camping spots yet in Waitakere. No surprise there)

2a) I cannot recall the amount of times that the "Sweet old couple in Tauranga cannot visit their grandson in Remuera because they cannot camp outside their house" Always the same story, I heard it first 6 years ago!

The last time was on talk back last week.

- 3) The NZMCA will get Freedom Camping on Auckland streets outside residents homes even in a Covid 19 Pandemic and the borders opening, with a new a more virulent strain coming, they will get even more Freedom Camping sites on reserves with the help of their cronies on the Council and Local Boards.

My Last and most important comments are.

With the borders opening and a new strain of Covid coming, and hundreds of rental campervans waiting at the airport, what on earth could go wrong?

The New Zealand Motor Caravan Association (NZMCA) will get freedom camping on Auckland streets outside residents' homes even in a Covid-19 pandemic. The NZMCA will get even more freedom camping sites on reserves with the help of their cronies on the Auckland Council and Local Boards.

We have in these bylaw decision makers, a group of self-elected, self-interested, easily-led people. Of the most part, this group of decision makers is of unparalleled incompetence, whose probity is in doubt, and whose lack of diligence will result in many Aucklanders dying of Covid-19 in their homes.

Covid is at your door courtesy of the Auckland City Council.

It is obscene.

You do not need modelling to see that.

Let me debate this with your think tank, come on don't hide behind PR Spin, come out and debate the issue with me you can "Have Your Say"

I have attached a Visual presentation that I have shown to Rodney Local Board, Ratepayer associations, Auckland Council, and Jacqueline Dean politician Member of Parliament for the Waitaki electorate, where she represents the National Party.

She is the only person who has had the courage to debate this issue with me; it was organised by Michael Barnett at the Auckland Chamber of Commerce.

(She also had no time for NZMCA). (See attachment)

Dear Auckland Council,

Parking in the beachfront car parks at Snells Beach.

We attach a series of parked vehicle pictures and that of the signage regulating parking at Sunburst Car Park, Snells Beach. We believe that most of the vehicles illustrated are in breach of the relevant by laws, eg: they are not self contained, they are articulated large caravans, they are too big for the car park etc.

Please advise us what we can do by way of gathering further evidence of this inappropriate use of our car parks and what Auckland Council will do to enforce the by laws.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Thank you for the opportunity to present the Titirangi Residents & Ratepayers Association

(TRRA)'s submission on Freedom Camping Bylaw.

This submission is made by The Titirangi Residents and Ratepayers Association, a non-profit incorporated society formed in 1987 to promote and represent the interests of ratepayers and residents in the Titirangi area. The Association can be traced back to the 1920s when an unincorporated society is recorded as lobbying Council regarding roads.

The Freedom Camping Act says a local authority can prohibit or restrict freedom camping:

1. To protect an areaPlaces specifically "prohibited" or "restricted" which are listed in the bylaw. 2. To protect the health and safety of people who visit the area
3. To protect access to the area.

The new bylaw makes Council-owned land everywhere in the region available for freedom camping with the following exceptions:

- Land held under the Reserves Act – this covers most local parks
- All regional parksThere are only 3 prohibited places specified in the draft bylaw for Waitakere Ranges – Lopdell grounds, Sandys

Parade (Laingholm), entrance to Goldies Bush, Te Henga.

This means that freedom camping can occur in the following places:

- Any road reserve, pull-off space or parking area in the road reserve
- Parks and land held under the Local Government Act.

Key Points:

The Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area is protected by law because of the special and nationally significant features that the local authority is obliged to “protect and enhance”.

These features include (among others):

“Its terrestrial and aquatic ecosystems of prominent indigenous character”

“The different classes of landforms and landscapes”

“The coastal areas”

“The naturally functioning streams”

“The quietness and darkness of the Waitakere Ranges and the coastal parts of the area”

“The eastern foothills”

The Association submits that these features will be threatened by allowing freedom camping to take place on road reserves, parks and other public land within the Heritage Area. We therefore submit to

- Mahoe Road end, Titirangi

- Aydon Road end, Titirangi
- Okewa Road end, Titirangi
- The Parade road end, Titirangi
- Valley Road end, Titirangi
- Opou Road end, Titirangi
- Woodbay Road end, Titirangi
- Inaka Place road end, Titirangi

- Tainui Road end, Titirangi
- Boylan Road end, Titirangi

- York Road end, Titirangi
- Jays Road end, Titirangi
- Sylvan Valley Ace road end, Titirangi
- Minnehaha Ave road end, Titirangi
- Landing Road end, Titirangi
- Helios Place road end, Titirangi
- Deirdre Place road end, Titirangi
- Fawcett Road end, Titirangi
- Brownie Road end, Titirangi
- Janet Place road end, Titirangi
- Exhibition Drive Titirangi (both ends)
- Tawini Road end, Titirangi that the entire Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area should be a prohibited area under reason (1) To protect an area in the bylaw.

There are already a number of designated camping areas and campsites within the Heritage Area that are sufficient to service visitors to the area and have the necessary facilities to ensure that damage to the heritage features does not take place. They are very reasonably priced and accessible to everyone.

The survival of these campsites will be economically threatened by allowing freedom camping to take place within the Heritage Area. Camping is a seasonal business and thanks to the additional stresses of Covid for the last two years they have been pushed to the brink. Our communities need these businesses to thrive. Allowing freedom camping will not achieve this and will put additional pressure on public facilities such as toilets, parking and beach access that is unsustainable. There are already a number of specifically identified locations within the Heritage Area where freedom camping can take place and is controlled. This should continue.

Lighting fires, leaving rubbish, using the environment as a toilet, washing clothes/dishes/themselves and taking water from public toilet blocks (that depend on roof water to function) are currently problems that freedom campers cause and this has been well documented in the media with examples from all over the country. We do not need these to proliferate within the Heritage Area. Fire is a constant and significant threat to the bush and communities of the Waitakere Ranges.

We therefore submit that the entire Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area should be a prohibited area under reason (2) To protect the health and safety of people who visit the area under the bylaw.

Many of the places in the Heritage Area are already under significant pressure from the number of day visitors. It is normal for all beach parking spaces to be fully occupied during summer weekends at places like Piha and Karekare. Allowing freedom camping to block up parking spaces for 2 nights at a time (and the days in between) is going to make access to our special places impossible for many day visitors and this is totally unreasonable. It will have knock on effects for residents, congestion and safety due to displacement of parking to less suitable locations. Many of the roads in the Waitakere Ranges are narrow and winding and there will be a danger to other road users if freedom campers pull off and use the road reserve to camp.

We therefore submit that the entire Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area should be a prohibited area under reason (3) To protect access to the area under the bylaw.

We are particularly concerned about freedom camping taking place at the ends of the many small residential streets in Titirangi. Most of these end in the bush or at a beach and are therefore attractive places for freedom campers. All of the problems listed above are a risk if freedom camping is allowed to take place here.

Specific places where freedom camping should be prohibited / restricted

There are a number of specific locations where freedom camping should not take place. These include:

- Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road local park
- Marine Parade North carparks on beachfront
- Marine Parade South carparks on beachfront
- Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road
- Karekare Road parking area at beach (partly road reserve)
- Anawhata Road entrance to Rose Track and White Track
- Anawhata Road northern end, end of road parking area
- Te Henga Bethells Road northern end carpark at beach
- Bethells Road entrance to Lake Wainamu Track
- French Bay Carparks, Titirangi
- Little Huia Huia Road
- Titirangi Beach carparks

- McEldowney Road / Paturoa Road junction at entrance to Davies Bay
- South Titirangi Road Jenkins Bay boat ramp carpark

Thank you for the opportunity to present the Titirangi Residents & Ratepayers Association (TRRA)'s submission on Freedom Camping Bylaw.

This submission is made by The Titirangi Residents and Ratepayers Association, a non-profit incorporated society formed in 1987 to promote and represent the interests of ratepayers and residents in the Titirangi area. The Association can be traced back to the 1920s when an unincorporated society is recorded as lobbying Council regarding roads.

The Freedom Camping Act says a local authority can prohibit or restrict freedom camping:

3. To protect access to the area.

The new bylaw makes Council-owned land everywhere in the region available for freedom camping with the following exceptions:

Places specifically “prohibited” or “restricted” which are listed in the bylaw. There are only 3 prohibited places specified in the draft bylaw for Waitakere Ranges – Lopdell grounds, Sandys Parade (Laingholm), entrance to Goldies Bush, Te Henga.

This means that freedom camping can occur in the following places:

- Parks and land held under the Local Government Act.

Key Points:

The Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area is protected by law because of the special and nationally significant features that the local authority is obliged to “protect and enhance”.

These features include (among others):

“Its terrestrial and aquatic ecosystems of prominent indigenous character”

“The different classes of landforms and landscapes”

“The coastal areas”

“The quietness and darkness of the Waitakere Ranges and the coastal parts of the area”

“The eastern foothills”

The Association submits that these features will be threatened by allowing freedom camping to take place on road reserves, parks and other public land within the Heritage Area. We therefore submit that the entire Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area should be a prohibited area under reason (1) To protect an area in the bylaw.

There are already a number of designated camping areas and campsites within the Heritage Area that are sufficient to service visitors to the area and have the necessary facilities to ensure that damage to the heritage features does not take place. # Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Te Henga (Bethells Beach) - Area of Concern: The area that this submission refers to is Bethells Road extending from Tasman View Road through the Coastal Settlement Zone adjacent to Te Henga Park to the road end at Te Henga (Bethells beach).

Action requested: Amendment of the bylaw to prohibit Freedom Camping along the Bethells Road from Tasman View Road to road end at Te Henga (Bethells Beach).

Justification: The proposed by-law does not place any limits on the number of vehicles that may occupy an area, nor the period within which camping may occur. Instead, it relies on the physical limitations for parking as the defacto moderator of scale and assumes only periodic use.

The Freedom Camping Act provides for a local authority to prohibit or restrict freedom camping to:

- 1) Protect an area
- 2) Protect access to the area.

Prohibition of freedom camping in the specified area is justified based on these conditions as outlined below.

1. To protect an area - the proposed by-law provides inadequate protection of the unique natural, landscape cultural, historic, and community features of the area.

The proposed bylaw relies on the physical limitations for parking as the defacto moderator of impacts due to scale and assumes only periodic use. Neither measure is realistic for the Te Henga (Bethells Beach) given:-

(a) the lack of defined boundaries and barriers between existing reserves, private properties, and the road reserve and

(b) the proximity of the area to the metropolitan area and the extremely high popularity of the area for locals and tourists.

Freedom Camping is currently not permitted in the Te Henga Park and it is presumed that this status will continue as per Council's notice that camping restrictions in parks will not be affected.

It has always been assumed that the park includes the roadside verge along Bethells Road which borders the reserve. Indeed, Council Rangers have previously acted to move along campers who were in breach of this. However, the boundary and status of the road reserve is unclear, as are the boundaries between residential properties and the road. This is in keeping with the low-density development of the coastal village. There are also no footpaths in this area to define the road area. Should the Bethells Road verge bordering the park be deemed roadside reserve, Freedom Camping will be permitted in this area.

Under the currently proposed bylaw, camperans could line both sides of Bethells road between the southern boundary of the park and the entrance to the carpark. Notwithstanding the potential encroachment onto private property, the density of Freedom Camping along this strip would be far greater than is currently allowed under residential development rules for the adjoining coastal village (based on a conservative estimate of parking, up to 15+ camper vans could be sited along an area of roadside bounded by less than 10 residential dwellings).

The effect would be equivalent to adding a row of high-density housing to the border between the coastal development and Te Henga Park.

To say that the current demand for Freedom Camping does not support this scenario is unreasonable because camping is currently not permitted and this status is informally managed by locals (with assistance of the Ranger as required).

To the contrary, it could reasonably be expected that allowing Freedom Camping would see a rapid and dramatic influx of campers within a very short period due to the wide-reaching impact of social media. Evidence for this can be seen in the huge rise in day-trippers to the Te Henga and Lake Wainamu areas which have become highly popularised on social media sites.

Te Henga (Bethells Beach) and its associated rural coastal settlement lie within the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area. The preamble to the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area Act (2008) recognises the special character of this area and provides for the built environment to be subservient to the natural environment and for the dark and quiet to be protected. While large numbers of day visitors visit the area, often exceeding parking capacity, night-time quiet and darkness is preserved by controls on residential development and non-residential activities. Such controls are outlined in the Local Area Plan (LAP) for Te Henga Bethells Beach and the Waitakere River Valley. Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area. (Adopted October 2015).

The Unitary Plan also includes provisions relating to residential development and non-residential . These are designed to ensure that these activities do not compromise the natural landscape historic and community features of the area. For example, See H2.3 Policies:-

(1) Require minimum site sizes and limit the scale and intensity of development for un-serviced sites to ensure that:
(b) development will be in keeping with any landscape qualities or natural features.

(4) Require development to be of a height and bulk and have sufficient setbacks and open space to maintain and complement the rural and coastal built character of the area.

(7) Enable non-residential activities that: (b) are in keeping with the scale and intensity of development anticipated within the zone; and (c.) avoid, remedy or mitigate adverse effects on residential amenity;

If residential development is constrained to protect the natural and amenity features of this area, then it follows that non-residential activities should also be managed to the same degree. Allowing freedom camping, constrained only by the physical limitations of parking, is inconsistent with the existing controls in place for this area. Highly predictable adverse effects would include increased night-time noise from human activities (including use of generators) and increased light pollution.

2). Protect access to the area – Freedom Camping will reduce access for day-time visitors at a ratio of up to 1:10.

Parking for day-trippers is now regularly reaching and exceeding capacity, with overflow resulting in dangerous and inconsiderate parking – the effects of which are damage to roadside plantings, narrowing of the road to one-lane in parts, loss of safe pedestrian access, and dangerous conditions for cyclists.

Allowing Te Henga Bethells Beach to become a destination for Freedom Camping would see an even further reduction of available parking for day-trippers and would deny a greater number of people access to this amenity. The ratio of campers to day-trippers could be as high as 1:10. For example, a moderately sized 2-berth camper van (2 person occupancy) parked for maximum stay of 2 nights and a morning would occupy at least 2 carparks/day. Assuming a turnover rate for day-tripper carparks of 2 cars/day, a single campervan could displace 4 day-tripper vehicles/day and up to 10 vehicles for the duration of stay – say a weekend.

Allowing 1 party to occupy space that then denies access to 10 others is unreasonable.

A “wait and see” approach to regulation is unjustified and inappropriate given the special status and sensitivity of this area.

A “wait and see” approach is not appropriate for the Waitakere Ranges Heritage Area. In promulgation of the Act, the adverse effects from intensification activities have already been identified and deemed unacceptable. To now await and require proof of adverse effects is equivalent to revisiting the underlying purpose of the Act.

Notwithstanding this, and the requirement for campervans to be self-contained under the bylaw, issues frequently occur with the even small number of freedom campers that use the area albeit illegally. These include use of the roadside areas as lavatories, using public facilities for ablutions and laundry adding to water use, and discharging waste-tanks in the public walking areas. It is noted that there are no waste pump-out facilities within 25 kms of this community.

In Summary – amendment of the bylaw to prohibit Freedom Camping along Bethells Road from Tasman View Road to road end at Te Henga (Bethells Beach) is necessary and justified to protect the special character of the area while ensuring wide community access to the public spaces within Te Henga and the Waitakere Regional Park.

Piha - We recommend that the Piha beach car park be designated a prohibited space for Freedom campers.

Our recommendation is based on the consistently heavy to extremely heavy level of use this car park gets already on any given day, by day hikers, surfers, fishers and beach goers in general. Over the Summer months, the car park is invariably full or close to full most of the day -from dawn till late in to the evening.

The road becomes a clogged slow moving procession of vehicles all looking for that elusive car park. Recently I'm noting more often that the roundabout at the end of Marine Parade is clogged with illegally parked cars (yellow lines) – even blocking the gate to the beach

To allow Freedom Campers to park in the car park will simply exacerbate what is already an over worked facility. It will further restrict what is a very limited availability of parking for these other users- with the nearest car park being some walk away back next to the lagoon

Given the internationally iconic nature and reputation of the beach-in the event that campers were allowed, we would fully expect to have campers parked up in the car park continuously throughout the year- which would result in a severe curtailment of enjoyment of the beach by a much larger group of current users- to the benefit of a relatively few number of privileged users in large motor homes. We suggest they park up next to the lagoon at the camping ground – off the road and out of the way

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - I wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the road reserves in: Piha, Karekare and Anawhata areas, that is, all roads from the intersection of Piha Road with Scenic Drive.

My reasons for this are:

1. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety because of lack of running water, lack of rubbish facilities, lack of security.
2. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes damage and native vegetation damage. Increase in dogs which harms our bird life. Rubbish pollution in environmental sanctuaries will increase.
3. Freedom camping in road reserves in forest will help spread kauri dieback with increased foot traffic and saturation of people.
4. Freedom camping at beachfronts and entrances to tracks and beaches will block access for day visitors and locals. And create unhealthy clustering in high volume areas.
5. This area already receives a very high visitation from people from Auckland and further afield, and cannot handle more visitors who will take parking space, block roads, use water, leave rubbish.
6. There are already issues with access for emergency vehicles such as fire trucks being blocked, so this is an added burden to an already summer saturated situation. It will need parking wardens and road safety will be compromised.
7. There is already provision for camping by campervans within regional parks and at the Piha campground so it is the perfect solution to avoiding all the other issues mentioned in my submission.
8. We are in a pandemic and if this is about a lack of housing freedom camping is no answer. It opens up to a host of other health issues like the spreading of the virus and transient people with no community incentives to act in the interests of place and people.

9. Garden road is a wahi Tapu and it contains very old heritage trees that need conscious communities. Freedom camping will compromise this.

10. Without support systems for managing freedom camping the toll and management will fall on locals. This is unviable.

11. Freedom camping isn't free, there's a cost to the community, the environment and it encourages living in your car which we need to help families get out of not more deeply into.

12. Designated freedom camping area is way more sensible, practical and manageable. Please think harder before setting off a whole host of other issues.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Piha - I would like to comment on the proposed options for campervans at Piha and other Westcoast beaches .

Campervans overnighting on the beach front was brought in at very scenic Anzac Bay by western bay of plenty council . It has since been abandoned because of their impact on the ambience and beauty of the bay and beach .

Campervans are white and are a taller and larger than any car . They dominate physically and visually .Even more so when there are numbers of them .

Many of Piha's residents look down from homes to the sea . Cars being small have very little impact. .

The other point I would like you to consider is that many busy days at Piha , every car park is important and two campers are probably equivalent to three or four cars .

Given these factors parking over night , cars or vans , on the beach front should not be permitted to allow fair access to the beach for everyone .

I therefore recommend that campervans only be allowed overnight in camping grounds at the west coast beaches.

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

I propose the following places be added to the prohibited list:

Lake Wainamu car park, the adjacent Te Henga walkway carpark, also the Bethells Beach car park which all fall under the Waitakere Ranges Heritage area.

My reasons for wanting these areas added to the prohibited list are:

1. These areas are under massive strain with hundreds of cars trying to park here on a busy weekend day already. Parking is limited.

When we have large vehicles like campervans (or buses or trucks) it puts even more pressure on the limited car parking for these unique heritage areas, blocking day trippers.

2. We don't have safe pedestrian walkways linking our subdivisions and the lake/beach, this means visitors and locals use the road to weave in and out of traffic and parked cars to get places, encouraging campervans to also park here would add to a situation that is already really unsafe.

3. The Lake Wainamu carpark is used as a turning bay for large vehicles - the only place for large vehicles to turn around in this whole area. This was used thoroughly by Fulton Hogan in September this year (2021) for works after enormous flood damage to this area (See image B for birds eye of this small car park).

4. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety (if they are toileting in the bush because their campervan isn't actually contained or toilet working, if they are leaving their rubbish, if they are starting campfires, if they are noisy into the night).

5. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes and native vegetation (more visitors to the area in general and more people roaming around the area as they 'live' there for a few days).

6. This area already receives huge visitation from people from Auckland and further afield, and cannot accommodate more visitors who will take up parking spaces for days on end.

7. There are already issues with access for emergency vehicles such as fire trucks being blocked, and freedom camping will make this worse.

8. Our community have stepped in to help manage these areas as Auckland Council and Auckland Transport don't have the resources for the sheer volume of visitors to places like Te Henga/Bethells Beach in a growing Auckland, for example we have been told to phone AT if we need Parking Officers, despite numerous requests Bethells/Te Henga isn't on the regular weekend route for Parking Officers, they come if called but usually come out hours later when the issues have cleared.

Situations like these don't give us a lot of hope that we will have management of Freedom Camping areas and feel it will fall to our community to help manage as we are with parking & traffic flow.

I would also like the following places added due to most of the tracks in the Waitakere ranges being closed due to Kauri Dieback, travel being restricted due to Covid and massive subdivisions going in around West Auckland, these natural areas are already at breaking point and the council have given no evidence that they will support the management of freedom campers in these places already under strain:

Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road local park

Marine Parade North carpark on beachfront

Marine Parade South carpark on beachfront

Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road

Karekare Road Parking area at beach (partly road reserve)

Anawhata Road entrance to Rose Track and White Track

Anawhata Road northern end, end of road parking area

Te Henga Bethells Road northern end carpark at beach

French Bay French Bay Carparks

Little Huia, Huia Road

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - I wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the road reserves in the Piha, Karekare and Anawhata areas, that is, all roads from the intersection of Piha Road with Scenic Drive.

My reasons for this are:

1. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety.
2. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes and native vegetation.
3. Freedom camping in road reserves within forest could spread kauri dieback.
4. Freedom camping at beachfronts and entrances to tracks and beaches will block access for day visitors.

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - I wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the road reserves in the Piha, Karekare and Anawhata areas, that is, all roads from the intersection of Piha Road with Scenic Drive.

My reasons for this are:

1. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety.
2. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes and native vegetation.
3. Freedom camping in road reserves within forest could spread kauri dieback.
4. Freedom camping at beachfronts and entrances to tracks and beaches will block access for day visitors.
5. The West Coast and parkland is already at capacity from people from Auckland and further afield, with overflowing rubbish bins, parking blocking driveways and carparks full often from before midday.
6. The area cannot accommodate more visitors especially as the bylaw allows parking for days on end.
7. There are already issues with access for emergency vehicles such as fire trucks being blocked by vehicles, and freedom camping will make this worse.
8. There is provision for camping by campervans within regional parks and at the Piha campground so it is not necessary to provide further sites.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Piha - I'm a resident at Piha and have lived my whole life on the black sands of this beach. I'm writing to ask that Piha be protected from the Freedom Camping by-law because our environment and infrastructure are already overwhelmed. We have a perfectly good campground located in the middle of the rohe and a business owner that needs support, not for people to be given the option to camp for free, stress the already under pressure infrastructure and cause degradation of the environment.

My experience of campervans on the beachfront at Piha is that campers use the dunes as a toilet because the facilities are closed, leave toilet paper strewn in the dunes and on the footpaths and rubbish accumulates around the bins.

Not only do the human residents of this Heritage Area need dark, quiet nights but so do our precious and unique wildlife, including the dotterels and the penguins.

It's for these reasons that we ask that Piha be exempt from the Freedom Camping by-law. This destination is too precious and already under extreme pressure from human activities.

- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Piha - I wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the road reserves in the Te Henga/Bethells area, including the Lake Wainamu Carpark, Te Henga Walkway Carpark and Bethells Beach Carpark.

My reasons for this are:

1. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety.
2. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes and native vegetation.
3. Freedom camping in road reserves in forest could spread kauri dieback.
4. Freedom camping at beachfronts and entrances to tracks and beaches will block access for day visitors.
5. This area already receives high visitation from people from Auckland and further afield, and cannot accommodate more visitors who will take up parking spaces for days on end.
6. There are already issues with access for emergency vehicles such as fire trucks being blocked, and freedom camping will make this worse.
7. There is provision for camping by campervans within regional parks and at the Piha campground so it is not necessary to provide further sites.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

I propose the following places be added to the prohibited list:

Lake Wainamu car park, the adjacent Te Henga walkway carpark, also the Bethells Beach car park which all fall under the Waitakere Ranges Heritage area.

A group of local Bethells community members volunteered our time every weekend and public holiday from New Years Day to Easter weekend 2021 to help guide visitors to park in the right places, help traffic flow and answer visitor queries (about the toilets, cell phone reception, parking, location of dunes/lake/te henga walkway), call emergency services for accidents on the dunes, pick up rubbish, put up informational signs etc.

This group was formed due to the volume of visitors and the lack of management of these areas which meant people were parking anywhere they liked, traffic jams on the road meant emergency vehicles couldn't get through, rubbish left, cars broken into, dogs in no dog zones.

I am one of those volunteers so we have first hand knowledge of what the parking and visitor behaviour is like.

My reasons for wanting these areas added to the prohibited list are:

1. These areas are under massive strain with hundreds of cars trying to park here on a busy weekend day already. Parking is limited.

When we have large vehicles like campervans (or buses or trucks) it puts even more pressure on the limited car parking for these unique heritage areas, blocking day trippers.

2. We don't have safe pedestrian walkways linking our subdivisions and the lake/beach, this means visitors and locals use the road to weave in and out of traffic and parked cars to get places, encouraging campervans to also park here would add to a situation that is already really unsafe (see image A).

3. The Lake Wainamu carpark is used as a turning bay for large vehicles - the only place for large vehicles to turn around in this whole area. This was used thoroughly by Fulton Hogan in September this year (2021) for works after enormous flood damage to this area (See image B for birds eye of this small car park).

4. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety (if they are toileting in the bush because their campervan isn't actually contained or toilet working, if they are leaving their rubbish, if they are starting campfires, if they are noisy into the night).

5. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes and native vegetation (more visitors to the area in general and more people roaming around the area as they 'live' there for a few days).

6. This area already receives huge visitation from people from Auckland and further afield, and cannot accommodate more visitors who will take up parking spaces for days on end.

7. There are already issues with access for emergency vehicles such as fire trucks being blocked, and freedom camping will make this worse (see image C)

8. Our community have stepped in to help manage these areas as Auckland Council and Auckland Transport don't have the resources for the sheer volume of visitors to places like Te Henga/Bethells Beach in a growing Auckland, for example we have been told to phone AT if we need Parking Officers, despite numerous requests Bethells/Te Henga isn't on the regular weekend route for Parking Officers, they come if called but usually come out hours later when the issues have cleared. I have recently put a complaint through regarding Parking Officers coming out and then for some reason not ticketing vehicles that are clearly on yellow lines (REF CAS-463702-N9F9J3).

Situations like these don't give us a lot of hope that we will have management of Freedom Camping areas and feel it will fall to our community to help manage as we are with parking & traffic flow.

I would also like the following places added due to most of the tracks in the Waitakere ranges being closed due to Kauri Dieback, travel being restricted due to Covid and massive subdivisions going in around West Auckland, these natural areas are already at breaking point and the council have given no evidence that they will support the management of freedom campers in these places already under strain:

Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road local park

Marine Parade North carparks on beachfront

Marine Parade South carparks on beachfront

Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road

Karekare Road Parking area at beach (partly road reserve)

Anawhata Road entrance to Rose Track and White Track

Anawhata Road northern end, end of road parking area

Te Henga Bethells Road northern end carpark at beach

French Bay French Bay Carparks

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Piha - I am a resident of Piha for over 20 years and am making this submission regarding the proposed Freedom Camping bylaw. These comments are based on my own personal experience of what I have witnessed over the years, and my concern for allowing freedom camping in Piha without enforced restrictions, or a total ban in some places.

Campers defecating on the whenua is a persistent issue. Campers also use showers in changing sheds to wash - and use hand basins to wash clothes and dishes. This is unhygienic and also reduces the water supply in places which depend on roof water.

I have personally witnessed freedom campers taking up public space for the personal use of the campers - using the public space to spread out camping gear, hang out the laundry and also light fires. I have politely requested one van of freedom campers to extinguish burners during the summer months when it has been particularly dry.

The beachfront carpark has been taken up with large camper vehicles using two spaces. During the peak periods and with day trippers, this has been particularly frustrating especially when heading down to the beach to surf. It is not unusual for the carparks to be full on weekends, public holidays and during the summer period.

There is a campground on Piha Domain, however the Piha Domain has experienced a reduction in size by flooding issues. Allowing freedom camping for two nights in all the carparks on the beachfront will have a major impact on the viability of the very long-standing and valued Piha Campground which currently provides access to the beaches and parks to a wide range of visitors. Some might argue that with money saved on campground fees, could contribute to other establishments in the community. I have yet to see any evidence to back up this argument.

I would like to submit the following locations have a total ban on freedom camping:

Piha Wetland, 42 Seaview Road local park

Marine Parade North carparks on beachfront

Marine Parade South carparks on beachfront

Glen Esk Road, eastern end carpark at end of road

Karekare Road Parking area at beach (partly road reserve)

Anawhata Road entrance to Rose Track and White Track

Anawhata Road northern end, end of road parking area

Te Henga Bethells Road northern end carpark at beach

Bethells Road entrance to Lake Wainamu Track

French Bay French Bay Carparks

Little Huia Huia Road

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Piha - I live at Piha, and am worried about plans to let campervans park on the roadsides and carparks here.

Firstly, on sunny days there is often little or no room for day visitors to park. It doesn't seem fair to let campervans prevent day trippers from West Auckland, and elsewhere, coming here for a day.

Also, I'm really worried about the effects of more people on the threatened dotterels, penguins and other birds.

Piha - Please may I add my humble opinion to the debate over whether or not freedom camping should be allowed at Piha.

I think NO.

Piha has a relatively small available area for public parking and access to the beaches-only 4 formed carparks, the grassed area of the Domain and along the foreshore. On any fine weekend these areas are packed with day trippers' cars and surfers.

There have been issues with access to driveways, and rubbish overflowing bins and left on the ground. I can imagine the state of the toilets after a busy day.

There would be even more pressure on the flat areas adjacent to the beach if campers were added to the mix. These are right in front of people's homes.

There is a lovely Council-owned campground at the heart of Piha. The leasee has struggled to make a livelihood over the past few years, with first a restriction of the available area because of the floodplain designation, and then Covid-19 closing down the tourism. Allowing freedom campers in the same vicinity will further erode this business and possibly cause unemployment for camp staff.

Also, the Camp Manager has put in place a Vaccine Pass policy for campers in order to protect the community.

Similar controls could not be placed on freedom campers, adding to the vulnerability of our small community.

There is nothing to stop freedom campers for staying for weeks in the area, as long as they move pitches every three days. Last time we had freedom camping here there was an element of people who were permanently living in their vehicles, along with their uncontrolled dogs. I wouldn't want to see that again.

#1570

Lastly the interpretation of self-contained vehicles is questionable. Even if there is a portable toilet in the van, who would use it given the opportunity of a public toilet or behind the bushes, knowing you would have to deal with the contents yourself eventually?

I hope these points can be taken into consideration.

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - I wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the road reserves in the Piha, Karekare and Anawhata areas, that is, all roads from the intersection of Piha Road with Scenic Drive.

My reasons for this are:

1. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety.
2. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes and native vegetation.
3. Freedom camping in road reserves within forest could spread kauri dieback.
4. Freedom camping at beachfronts and entrances to tracks and beaches will block access for day visitors.
5. The West Coast and parkland is already at capacity from people from Auckland and further afield, with overflowing rubbish bins, parking blocking driveways and carparks full often from before midday.
6. The area cannot accommodate more visitors especially as the bylaw allows parking for days on end.
7. There are already issues with access for emergency vehicles such as fire trucks being blocked by vehicles, and freedom camping will make this worse.
8. There is provision for camping by campervans within regional parks and at the Piha campground so it is not necessary to provide further sites.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - I wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in these reserves in Piha, Kare Kare, and Anawhata, from the intersection of Piha road with the Senic Drive. My reasons are.

1. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety.
2. F.C already causes damage and risk to the environment such as dunes and native vegetation.
3. F.C in road reserves within forests could cause kauri dieback.

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata - I wish to see freedom camping prohibited in all road reserves and car parking areas in the road reserves in:

Piha, Karekare and Anawhata areas, that is, all roads from the intersection of Piha Road with Scenic Drive.

My reasons for this are:

1. Freedom camping already causes problems of health, hygiene and safety because of lack of running water, lack of rubbish facilities, lack of security.
2. Freedom camping already causes damage and risks to the environment such as dunes damage and native vegetation damage. Increase in dogs which harms our bird life. Rubbish pollution in environmental sanctuaries will increase.
3. Freedom camping in road reserves in forest will help spread kauri dieback with increased foot traffic and saturation of people.
4. Freedom camping at beachfronts and entrances to tracks and beaches will block access for day visitors and locals. And create unhealthy clustering in high volume areas.
5. This area already receives a very high visitation from people from Auckland and further afield, and cannot handle more visitors who will take parking space, block roads, use water, leave rubbish.
6. There are already issues with access for emergency vehicles such as fire trucks being blocked, so this is a added burden to a already summer saturated situation. It will need parking wardens and road safety will be compromised.
7. There is already provision for camping by campervans within regional parks and at the Piha campground so it is the perfect solution to avoiding all the other issues mentioned in my submission.

8. We are in a pandemic and if this is about a lack of housing freedom camping is no answer. It opens up to a host of other health issues like the spreading of the virus and transient people with no community incentives to act in the interests of place and people.

9. Garden road is a wahi Tapu and it contains very old heritage trees that need conscious communities. Freedom camping will compromise this.

10. Without support systems for managing freedom camping the toll and management will fall on locals. This is unviable.

11. Freedom camping isn't free there's a cost to the community, the environment and it encourages living in your car which we need to help families get out of not more deeply into.

12. Designated freedom camping area is way more sensible, practical and manageable. Please think harder before setting off a whole host of other issues.

13 In Piha there is a very limited number of carparks both side of the road and domain for one day beach goes if freedom campers are permitted to park along the sides of roads there'll be even fewer parking spaces for both locals and one day visitors to the beach
