Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay for an indefinite period in the same road or off-road parking area (no maximum stay rule)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: No maximum stay gives campers the best opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, Shorter stays are already the norm for most freedom campers, so a maximum stay rule is not necessary, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should not have to leave by a set time (no set departure time rule)

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, It is not necessary to require campers to leave at a set time; they don't block others' access to shared parking or amenities

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers should be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area at any time (no no-return period rule)

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, It is not necessary to require campers to leave at a set time; they don't block others' access to shared parking or amenities

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Campers should have the right to come back to favourite places during their trip, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule. Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, It is not necessary to require campers to leave at a set time; they don't block others' access to shared parking or amenities

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: Having a shorter no-return period means campers would be able to return to a favourite place if they wanted to, as part of a longer trip

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, and council has not identified any serviced areas in this proposal

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay for an indefinite period in the same road or off-road parking area (no maximum stay rule)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: No maximum stay gives campers the best opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, Shorter stays are already the norm for most freedom campers, so a maximum stay rule is not necessary

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should not have to leave by a set time (no set departure time rule)

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, It is not necessary to require campers to leave at a set time; they don't block others' access to shared parking or amenities, It would be too hard to enforce a set departure time rule

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers should be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area at any time (no no-return period rule)

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, It is not necessary to require campers to leave at a set time; they don't block others' access to shared parking or amenities, It would be too hard to enforce a set departure time rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Campers should have the right to come back to favourite places during their trip, It would be too hard to enforce a no-return period rule Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, It is not necessary to require campers to leave at a set time; they don't block others' access to shared parking or amenities, It would be too hard to enforce a set departure time rule

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 10am on the day of departure

Is this because, in your view: 10am is a typical check-out time if you are paying for accommodation, so it makes sense to align with this

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? Will not be enough places for camping.

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): Three days would be better, which allows for a later departure than 9 0,clock

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

People should not be fined for an overnight stay in a normal car or van or small truck, certification for "self contained" is too difficult.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, There are better ways to prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland, The general rules will unfairly impact some people. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): With borders closed to tourists, it is disingenuous to even call people living in vehicles "freedom campers". Many of these people have jobs and children attending schools, they cannot move around easily. We have a very longstanding HOUSING CRISIS

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? By looking at instances of problems since Covid closed the borders and government took over motels for homeless you can obtain a fresh perspective on the needs of people just trying to live within their means and the fact that they want to be unobtrusive! Provide more services please, toilets, dump stations, fresh water supplies, in many more places will avoid acts of desperation that annoy locals and people will willingly pay for these services. Allowing people to stop in quiet areas and to move easily if any spot is noisy or overcrowded will make for better peaceful solutions for both residents and 'campers'.

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby? By increasing access to more areas (allowing spread), and by providing paid access to services at more locations. Water supply, dump stations and toilet/shower blocks could be accessed by a prepay app with an individual code to 'open locked access'.

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? Lack of housing, lack of affordable accommodation is the current driver of mobile living. Please STOP thinking of this as people 'visiting'

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – freedom camping vehicles should be self-contained, but they shouldn't have to be certified

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: The cost of buying, hiring, or converting to a certified self-contained vehicle is too high, and that could mean some people can't afford to freedom camp in Auckland. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): These people are not visitors, this is their lives! and all would be willing to pay a fair price for necessary services (which they must currently be using without paying and without convenient access).

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): People receiving medical treatment (or caring for an inpatient) need to be able to remain in a location for longer. Parents of school age children attending school need to be able to leave their vehicle parked for longer. People working in an area need to

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain)

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain): Registered campers should not have to move their vehicles at all where they are catching public transport to work, where their children may need to come back to the vehicle during the day, or where the person is having medical treatment in the area.

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain)

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain): Allow campers to be registered if there is good cause for them to remain in a specific area.

Prohibited site

Heron Park 1625-1627 Great North Road, Waterview, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? Having visited the area, I have enjoyed the wonderful views, the bush and the sense of community. It would be quite inappropriate to have any sort of freedom camping here.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): The freedom camping act does not permit councils to impose blanket bans nor restrictions . They can only be imposed where there has been a proven need for them to protect the environment public access and health & safety . Council need to provide evidence of these issues in specified areas before they can impose restriction or bann

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Id like to see the research that council has undertaken on the specified areas to be banned or restricted to determine the need for the restrictions or banns . Complaints from ratepayers alone is not sufficient to meet the criteria under the f.c act

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra rest

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. #### General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard, It would be too hard to enforce the self-containment rule without referencing the National Standard

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): By providing the opportunity for two nights, freedom campers can rest instead of rushing from one destination to the next thus perhaps reducing road accidents from driving tired

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra rest

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a shorter no-return period means campers would be able to return to a favourite place if they wa

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers should be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area at any time (no no-return period rule)

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. # Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay for an indefinite period in the same road or off-road parking area (no maximum stay rule)

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles should be allowed to come back to stay in the same area after dumping their waste responsibly, it is not necessary to prevent their return through this rule, No maximum stay gives campers the best opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, Shorter stays are already the norm for most freedom campers, so a maximum stay rule is not necessary. Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): Maximum rule should not apply to residential, industrial streets as people camp near their or friends', families homes and near workplaces.

Maximum stay rule can apply to more sensitive areas like reserves.

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, Although no serviced areas have been identified in this proposal, providing sites suitable for non-self-contained vehicles should be a priority for council, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): In remote areas (if there are such) where the area is not close to human habitation, popular recreational areas or environmental sensitive areas (bird sanctuaries etc) then a more flexible max stay could apply to fully self contained vehicles such as a we

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Many councils in NZ have set up fully serviced areas that do not greatly impact on the area. The size of many toilet / changing sheds at beaches - these are toilets, showers, washing, kitchenette etc (I believe with govt funding). An example is the very well designed and simple structures built by Kiwicamp company which is available for the general public (toilets / rubbish etc) and for those who wish to pay for the service (Showers / kitchenette etc)

To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – freedom camping vehicles should not be required to be self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The kind of vehicle used for freedom camping in Auckland should be a personal choice, The cost of buying, hiring, or converting to a self-contained vehicle is too high, and that could mean some people can't afford to freedom camp in Auckland

Another reason (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay for an indefinite period in the same road or off-road parking area (no maximum stay rule)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles should be allowed to come back to stay in the same area after dumping their waste responsibly, it is not necessary to prevent their return through this rule, No maximum stay gives campers the best opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, Shorter stays are already the norm for most freedom campers, so a maximum stay rule is not necessary

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should not have to leave by a set time (no set departure time rule)

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, It is not necessary to require campers to leave at a set time; they don't block others' access to shared parking or amenities

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers should be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area at any time (no no-return period rule)

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, It is not necessary to require campers to leave at a set time; they don't block others' access to shared parking or amenities

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Campers should have the right to come back to favourite places during their trip, A no-return period is not necessary: most campers don't return to the same place, It would be too hard to enforce a no-return period rule. Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, It is not necessary to require campers to leave at a set time; they don't block others' access to shared parking or amenities

Another reason (please explain):

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? Provide more public toilet facilities. One of the main issues people have with freedom camping is lack of toilet facilities. So provide more toilet facilities, rather than banning freedom camping.

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? Housing unaffordability is increasing in Auckland. That is going to lead to more people without permanent homes or tenuous housing. Freedom camping bylaws will negatively impact those who are already marginalized by society.

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

These all seem to regulate freedom camping and to sanitise it. Without dealing with the root causes of the issues. People are living in different ways than we have in past, applying arbitrary rules to try and get everyone to fit in a box negates the realities faced by some people. where do you send people who have no where to go?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 10am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: 10am is a typical check-out time if you are paying for accommodation, so it makes sense to align with this

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): I don't think you should be able to freedom camp unless it's an appropriate designated area. The anti social behavior will be an issue in suburban areas.

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: Requiring campers to leave at 8am, before standard business hours begin, protects access to shared parking or other amenities for other users – which is more of a priority than campers' convenience

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Another reason (please explain):

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

The rules have changed since Covid. Freedom campers need to use a QR code in every place they stay. I would prefer vaccinated freedom campers near me. A lot of freedom campers tend to be anti vaxxers for reasons known only to themselves, which could cause major problems in the future trying to track and trace them. Freedom camping of unvaccinated people could be a super spreader especially as many freedom campers I know are against covid vaccination. I would not want to be anywhere near these people. I would prefer all freedom campers to show their vaccination certificate before staying anywhere.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

The Council must begin the process by rigidly establishing Resident Parking zones. To protect residents from having to park at a distance from their abode.

Trades and service people need to be exempt from daytime resident parking requirements

The Council must investigate ways to enforce the General Rules, which come at a cost to Freedom Campers - not residents. (For example levies on self-containment certification).

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Residents in Auckland already face challenges with AT (Auckland Transport) limiting on-street parking options. Freedom Campers should under no circumstances be given priority over rate paying/rent-paying residents for street parking. There are social risks other than sanitation. Neighbourhoods have every reason to question the presence of strangers in their area, they do so for the safety of their children and property.

Prohibited site

Heron Park 1625-1627 Great North Road, Waterview, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area? Yes

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? There needs to be considerably more public areas prohibited from Freedom Campers. This need to be done in consultation with locals. Each reserve where Freedom Camping is conceivable needs the surrounding neighbourhoods canvassed in a survey.

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause. It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland. The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? Education and providing more toilets and rubbish bins.

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? It's expensive to get self contained, most people can't afford that.

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – freedom camping vehicles should not be required to be self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Using a vehicle that is not self-contained does not pose a risk to the environment or public health and safety, The cost of buying, hiring, or converting to a self-contained vehicle is too high, and that could mean some people can't afford to freedom camp in Auckland

Another reason (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – freedom camping vehicles should be self-contained, but they shouldn't have to be certified

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

'In general I am very supportive of this proposed Bylaw.

- I support that vehicles should hold an SCC
- I support freedom camping on street locations.
- I support freedom camping up to two nights.
- I support that freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks.

In part of the decision making about sites for freedom camping, your literature indicates that the provision of public toilets was considered, and page 12 of the consultation document states that "Auckland has very few areas with safe access to 24-hour toilets". I feel that this is a generic concern that should be addressed by council and is not a problem that is particular to freedom campers.

If sites under the reserve act are considered prohibited for freedom camping, I would expect these sites to have clear signage to indicate this. If this signage is not in place, and there is no list provided for sites that are under the reserve act – how should a camper know? If there is no signage, then campers cannot be fined.

I would love to see positive language on council's web site and public communications around freedom camping. The stereotype of freedom campers causing trouble and being messy is untrue, and it is through language that negative stereotypes are reinforced.

I do not believe that enough freedom camping locations have been designated for locals and tourists. I expect that for the foreseeable future many locals will choose to travel and explore locally and this will increase demand for freedom camping locations. Auckland Regional Parks camp grounds have a limited duration stays and so freedom camping is a way to connect longer stays with shorter ones. There are no DOC campsites on Auckland mainland (as far as I am aware), and so the number of affordable camping locations is few. When we do have foreign visitors back in Auckland, demand will certainly outstrip supply.

Of the sites were trialed as locations for freedom camping in 2018, which of these were considered successful that could be incorporated into the designated freedom camping sites?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Prohibited site

Heron Park 1625-1627 Great North Road, Waterview, do you agree that freedom camping should be prohibited in this area?

Tell us why and any other comments you would like to make about this area? No sites are proposed as restricted areas. This limits fair access for freedom campers. Coyle Park carpark (at the toilet block) seems to be a viable freedom camping location (it is at the end of a dead end street, away from residences, with enough parking spaces to allow for some (perhaps up to 3) to be designated as freedom camping spots. This location is not listed under the restricted sites. Being that there is no list of reserves to cross reference against - can I assume that this location can be used for freedom camping under the general rules?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard, It would be too hard t

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): Once general rules are in force everyone will (finally) know what the baseline is. Including whoever you pay to enforce the rules.

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): Two nights in Auckland City is reasonable; but slightly lengthier stays should be allowed in suitable places outside the city center. Each site should be clear what the allowance is and somebody should turn up every day and enforce the by-law.

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: 10am is a typical check-out time if you are paying for accommodation, so it makes sense to align with this, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule. Another reason (please explain)

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – freedom camping vehicles should be self-contained, but they shouldn't have to be certified

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): General rules will help guide the freedom campers behaviour and communities who are hosting them. Ultimately we want to find a way for these two groups to co-exist happily and general rules can support this. Please consider this in future communications.

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A later departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it more likely that they will visit local businesses, 10am is a typical check-out time if you are paying for accommodation, so it makes sense to align with this, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule, Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): As noted above, the combinations of the short max stay rule and the departure rule will have the effect of severely limiting campers stay in an area, reducing the use of local business. These two rules should be reconsidered in combination.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

These rules will impede communities benefitting from freedom campers, in terms of their local business contribution. While this is a stated benefit of freedom camping, it seems the rules have been developed with the goal of reducing the impacts of freedom camping, without consideration to maximising the benefits.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Freedom camping is a positive experience for many to learn that not everything has to be owned or bought to be enjoyed. It also provides business to local enterprises, and facilitates greater numbers of tourists who cannot afford to travel by other means. The irony of the push for restrictions in many areas is that over sized beach front properties, holiday homes or even oversized motorhomes are welcomed and encouraged. The push to limit freedom camping is ultimately a push to limit the accessibility off enjoyment of the joys of Auckland to the wealthy. Overall the purpose of by-laws should be to maximise the benefits to both campers and communities and minimise any real harms (NB: people being in your area on public land is not an injury). All action should also be taken to foster better relations between residents and visitors to areas.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, There are better ways to prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, and council has not identified any serviced areas in this proposal, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the N

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 10am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A later departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it more likely that they will visit local businesses, 10am is a typical check-out time if you are paying for accommodation, so it makes sense to align with this, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrict

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle. It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I believe it is unsuitable to open up residential streets without significant planning and resource allocated to monitoring this. This will also require additional funding and policing in a time when both of these resources are extremely stretched.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain): I support the general rules. But the major challenge is when travelling through an area is how to locate an acceptable place to freedom camp. As you have identified there are multiple laws and statutes for land owned or managed by multiple entities.

Therefore:

All areas that are subject to fines need to be clearly identified with visible on site signage before fines can be imposed.

Given that even the council can not clearly identify the ownership of parcels of land the fine of $800 for reserves should be in line with the $200 fine.

There needs to be a comprehensive list of the over 4,000 prohibited parks and reserves in Auckland

There needs to a be a published identification of where freedom parking is permitted under this act. ## Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should not have to leave by a set time (no set departure time rule)

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Not setting a departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it much more likely that they will visit local businesses, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule, It would be too hard to enforce a set departure time rule, Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): The combination of the 2 night stay rule and very early departure time effectively means that freedom campers will only be able to stay 1 day at any location which is completely unreasonable. e.g. Please consider what would happen if a freedom camper wanted to go somewhere for a weekend. Typically work or other commitments mean that the camper will arrive late in the afternoon or early evening on the first night of their stay. they can then spend Saturday there but have to depart at 9am on the Sunday. i.e they can't even stay there for a weekend.

Hotels and motels set departure times at 10am at the earliest and I have never been refused a late departure time, even when the hotel / motel has to clean the rooms and be ready for the next visitor. For freedom camping there is no such thing as cleaners coming in, there are no bookings for which the camper needs to depart to make room for, and there is no way of getting approval for a late departure thus a departure time has no justification.

This will also mean campers will be driving off and not benefiting businesses or utilising local beaches and walks etc. Travelling further than they have when they would like to stay a the day at a location and causing more unnecessary pollution by travelling.

Generally freedom campers will wish to depart at a time when the traffic is lightest. Forcing departure times, a particularly so early, will just contribute to traffic congestion issues.

Forcing campers to move from there camping spot at a set departure time early in the morning will only add to congestion at various locations as generally campers will park well out of the way and if forced to move are likely to move and park in parking spots which other visitors to the area which to use to visit local attractions, businesses etc.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain)

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain): A two week rule is effectively a three week ban on return as an arrival on a Friday and departure on a Sunday will mean they can not return until 3 weekends time, the period should be cut down to 7 days or less, so at least a camper could return two weekend later.

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Generally they are too restrictive. Freedom campers want to enjoy freedom! All these rules just lock down things so tightly that there will be no freedom to visit a site for more than 1 day. Travel and arrive, stay 1 night, 1 day at location, leave day 3 and travel to next location. This is completely unreasonable and will in people just moving on, moving on, moving on, never getting the chance to enjoy a location visit friends and contribute to travel pollution.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Controls and approvals should also enable council to allow temporary variations to the rules to enable more freedom camping at times. E.g. Rugby world cup event, etc

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland, The general rules will unfairly impact some people, Another reason (please explain)

Another reason (please explain): If you spent half as much time, effort and money on providing camping areas, recreational areas, rest areas, beach access areas and other areas around regional parks that you do in consulting on things like this, we wouldn't have a problem for certain demographics to complain about.

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

It's not a big problem and is a waste of everyone's time. Please prioritise providing toilets and wash facilities, beach showers etc for ALL Aucklanders rather than pandering to mythical populist narratives about hordes of publicly defecating freedom campers. You must do better than this.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Please rethink before acting on this. NZ will have a reputation as an expensive, unwelcoming, punitive society to satisfy the loud hankering of older demographics to exert control on others. It's not good for visitors or those growing up here. Provide facilities, provide options. Don't simply prohibit, it's an abrogation of responsibility.

If a person parks their SCC vehicle in an area that is marked as "freedom camping prohibited", but the person is not camping, simply using their vehicle as a vehicle, perhaps doing a sporting activity, going to the beach etc. - How will this behaviour be differentiated from freedom camping so as to ensure no incorrect enforcement fines? For a number of people, the vehicle they use for camping is their sole vehicle that they will use for general transport.

To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain): You forgot about tents. To get from Cape Reinga to Bluff, all people walking or cycling will pass through Auckland. Most will be using a tent.

Certified self contained vehicles create pollution, contribute to Global warming, and cause other health issues. You propose to reward them with exclusive rights to Freedom Camp in Auckland.

Those who do not pollute, who do not contribute to Global warming are banned from freedom Camping. Event though overall, these people are far more environmentally aware and careful .

With the recent Climate Change conference in Scotland just over, banning non climate warming freedom campers seems a slap in the face for the struggle against Global warming.

There are many other councils who allow tents in the freedom Camping bylaw e.g. Whanganui, Whangarei. It is quite possible to allow freedom camping in tents at selected areas with toilets available.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I am not sure that the blanket ban on Reserves is legal. You are required to consider all Council controlled land, and to just write off Reserves because it is an easy way to ban Freedom Camping is probably against the law. Marlborough District Council have recently completely reviewed all there possible camping areas because of a legal challenge.

the arrival times should also be constrained to reflect peak usage times of adjoining facilities. Activities continue or start in the evening too. Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Raymond Rd reserve in Pt Chevalier is not listed as a prohibited area because its classification is not specifically a reserve. This parking area was created physically and legally by the efforts of the Pt Chev Sailing Club . An Act of Parliament ceded it to the council ?harbour board and the club negotiated relinquishment of riparian right with a club member who owned an adjoining property. A long term lease is in place recognising the clubs position.

The lease grants the club discretion to manage the carpark use and priority use of Area B shown on the plan during race days. By the council legitimising by default freedom campers coming into the area the council is hindering the clubs use of its reclamation.

Experience before Covid was campers would come in on Friday and stay the weekend. Sailors would arrive at 8am on Sunday and find several large camper vans in their rigging area. The campers would gravitate to area B because its larger and their vans will not fit in area A.

To prevent campers being "managed" out of the area on race days and the attendant hostility likely the club will have to chain off Area B on Friday nights. This would prevent casual users such as windsurfers, paddleboarders and others using the area on Saturdays. This would not be good and the club has co existed with all users for 30 years. The casuals respect the club's creation of the area and vacate during race days.

The council as lessor is obliged to act to protect its lessee's use of the space and avoid creating likely hostility among public . There is also high danger of these big vehicles exiting the area around a nigh blind bend. The vans also park sideways taking up multiple spaces. That occurred a number of times in the past usage .

- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')

- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

This is crazy and i struggle to understand how this is justified to even get to this stage for a public vote. This places a significant burden on local residents in areas that would be of particular interest to freedom campers. This will not be policed effectively.

Focus on providing more appropriate camping facilities rather than making this the problem of the general public

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I actually think there should be NO freedom camping anywhere in New Zealand. There are good pay for sites already and where I stay overseas there are lots of farmers etc that earn money by renting space at a fair price. The freedom camping system discourages the setting up of smaller cheaper options and also encourages a type of tourism which is invasive and destructive to the environment. If we must have tourism we should have a form which encourages people who do spend money! I spend money on accommodation when I travel why shouldn't they? Final comment after a lifetime of paying taxes it find it "vexing" to not be able to visit my local national park in the summer as all car parks all full with "jucy" vans with washing strung up outside them!!

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Any rules are only as good as the ability to police them.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

There are only 4 designated 'prohibited' areas on Aotea/Great Barrier Island. I don't believe that freedom camping should be allowed anywhere on the island. I have seen firsthand the results of people camping along roadside and in carparks. The islanders work so hard to protect and enhance the environment it would be negligent to allow visitors to despoil the island which is guaranteed to happen.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

I think the restricted areas for freedom camping should be far more extensive on Great Barrier. The island has plenty of campgrounds, both DOC and private, there is no need to allow freedom camping anywhere on the island. The freedom camping vehicles clog up the limited parking places at the beaches and other popular family spots on island.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – freedom camping vehicles should not be required to be self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

I think the whole of Aotea/great barrier island should be restricted for freedom camping. there are enough beautiful camp grounds for people to stay at. I do not want people just parking anywhere and camping.

the summer of 20-21 there were lots of freedom campers just parking anywhere and not respecting our island. there was one group in tryphena who were using the flax bushes where they parked as a toilet

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause. Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay will prevent campers staying in an area longer-term, blocking others' access to parking or other amenities, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? Yes – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view: 9am would be more convenient for campers than 8am, but still protects access to shared parking or amenities for other users during standard business hours, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra rest

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle, The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-s

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: Requiring campers to leave at 8am, before standard business hours begin, protects access to shared parking or other amenities for other users – which is more of a priority than campers' convenience, Having a set departure time will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, Having a longer no-return period means most campers are unlikely to visit an area more than once, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? No – freedom camping vehicles should not be required to be self-contained

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

I think the gap between rich and poor is widening, and why are we making it harder for people who need to live in a vehicle. I agree with 2 night policy, as I get people cant set up camp forever, but people should not feel like they are criminals for sleeping in their vehicle. I also dont think people need to be self contained if there are bathrooms available.

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: Having a shorter no-return period means campers would be able to return to a favourite place if they wanted to, as part of a longer trip

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? I think having general rules will limit the freedom of people who aren't intentionally 'Freedom camping' but might be in a one off situation where they have to spend an overnight in the car, this could be a number of reasons such as car breakdown or refuge from a domestic violence situation.

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Although no serviced areas have been identified in this proposal, providing sites suitable for non-self-contained vehicles should be a priority for council

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain): three days for the maximum stay rule, what is the point of being able to store three days of waste if you can only stay for two days in a space?

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 10am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A later departure time will be more convenient for campers, and make it more likely that they will visit local businesses, 10am is a typical check-out time if you are paying for accommodation, so it makes sense to align with this

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain)

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain): 1 week return period, the no return period would still allow other campers to access the spot

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you have any other comments on the general rules?

Do you have any comments on these other parts of the Bylaw, or any other feedback you would like to give us?

There is little distinction given between freedom campers which cover people who are specifically going to a place with the intention of freedom camping and people who are sleeping in their cars due to a series of events that have changed their circumstance. I have seen fines given to people who are sleeping in their car when accommodation arrangements have been changed but are still utilising the services of a private property. In this case there was no undue effect on the environment, access or public. I think more definition for people who have been caught out either by drinking, loss of sleeping arrangements, unable to continue driving due to lack of sleep etc. needs to be addressed.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 10am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: 10am is a typical check-out time if you are paying for accommodation, so it makes sense to align with this

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas, Although council has not identified any serviced areas in this proposal, I am aware of serviced areas on public land which should be included, It makes sense to match our self-containment requirements to the National Standard

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? Yes – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a two-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, A two-night stay gives campers more opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: If freedom camping starts to cause problems somewhere, this is better managed by putting extra restrictions just in that area, rather than having a stricter general rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: Freedom campers should be subject to some basic rules wherever they stay in Auckland – no areas should be available for unlimited or indefinite freedom camping

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view: Requiring campers to leave at 8am, before standard business hours begin, protects access to shared parking or other amenities for other users – which is more of a priority than campers' convenience

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? Freedom camping will cause serious adverse impacts on the environment

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule?

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain)

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule?

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I do not support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view: There are better ways to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, There are better ways to prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby, It is not necessary to impose basic rules on freedom campers everywhere in Auckland, The general rules will unfairly impact some people

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause? No need for more rules

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby? No need for more rules

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people? No need for more rules

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule?

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule?

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

Note: this version of the feedback form has been created for the purpose of publishing submissions. As such, contact and demographic information has been removed and handwritten submissions have been transcribed.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and carparks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

I am in support of freedom camping and think it's a great activity.

My only concern is that tourists who use this option avoid the accommodation provider targeted rate and are only paying a small amount of GST and so no funding goes to our Regional Parks. They are using the Regional Parks and that does lead to wear and tear and those costs are not recovered.

I think there should be a targeted rate applied at rental places for when non-Auckland residents hire campervans etc. so they can contribute towards a fund for looking after our parks and beaches. Residents would of course be exempt as they already pay rates.

I would even suggest that there are lower rates for those opting to hire more sustainable vehicles e.g. electric vans.

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

Do you support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety, and shouldn't be allowed anywhere, on principle

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Vehicles are required to have three days' onboard waste storage per occupant, so a one-night maximum stay will help encourage responsible dumping of waste, Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays, A one-night stay still gives campers some opportunity to enjoy the area and support local businesses, but this is less of a priority than protecting access for other users of public space

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? No – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a four-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: A four-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users, A no-return period will help with enforcing the maximum stay rule

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Proposed new Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw 2021

We asked for feedback on an earlier version of this Bylaw, in 2018-19. After considering feedback, the council decided to develop a new Bylaw proposal. From October 26 to December 5, we asked the public to tell us what they think of this new Bylaw proposal.

We wanted submitters views on whether we have the balance right – between providing a safe and enjoyable experience for freedom campers visiting Auckland and protecting our environment, health and safety and access to public space for everyone.

Our Freedom Camping in Vehicles Bylaw will set rules for freedom camping in a vehicle on most council land in Auckland to protect:

- areas that are environmentally or culturally sensitive
- the health and safety of freedom campers and other users of public space
- access for everyone to our public places, facilities, and amenities.

The Bylaw:

- identifies areas where freedom camping is prohibited
- identifies areas where freedom camping is restricted and sets the specific rules that apply in these areas
- sets general rules that apply in all other areas covered by the bylaw (including most roads).

Reserve land has been excluded from the scope of the proposed Bylaw. This means camping at Auckland's reserves will continue to be managed under the Reserves Act 1977. The Reserves Act 1977 already prohibits all camping on reserves unless specific approval is given. You can find out more on our FAQs tab on the right side of the page.

General rules

About general rules

The Freedom Camping Act 2011 gives people the right to freedom camp on public land.

However, the Act also allows councils to make reasonable rules to protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access to shared space.

We're proposing four general rules that we think will:

- encourage responsible freedom camping and provide a reasonable minimum level of protection for most public places in Auckland
- make sure people can't move a short distance from a prohibited or restricted area to camp somewhere without any rules, as this could just displace any problems to adjacent areas
- make sure we're not limiting people's right to freedom camp any more than is necessary and justified under the Act.

Proposed general rules for Auckland

The four general rules we're proposing are:

- Freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle (the 'self-containment rule')
- Freedom campers must stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area (the 'maximum stay rule')
- Freedom campers must vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure (the 'departure time rule')
- Freedom campers must not return to stay in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks (the 'no-return period rule').

Our rationale for each of the general rules we're proposing is summarised under the question relating to that rule.

Where the general rules would apply

The general rules would apply in any area that is covered by the Bylaw, except for:

- designated areas where freedom camping is prohibited (listed in Schedule 1)
- designated areas where freedom camping is restricted (listed in Schedule 2), as these areas have their own specific rules.

This means the general rules will cover most public roadsides and car parks in Auckland. Note: any existing rules that control parking in these places – for example road markings and parking restrictions – still apply to freedom camping vehicles.

The general rules would not apply in areas that aren't covered by the Bylaw, including areas:

- on private property
- not managed by council (for example motorways)
- managed by council under other regulations (e.g. land held under the Reserves Act 1977).

Do you support the use of general rules for freedom camping in all areas not otherwise prohibited or restricted?

I support having general rules

Do you support having general rules because, in your view: General rules are a reasonable way to protect Auckland's environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause, Without general rules, there is a risk that any problems caused by freedom camping could move fr

Another reason (please explain):

Do you not support having general rules because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

How do you think we can better protect the environment, public health and safety, and public access from the problems freedom camping can cause?

How do you think we can prevent any problems caused by freedom camping moving from regulated areas to unregulated areas nearby?

How do you think the general rules will unfairly impact some people?

Do you want to comment on why you don't know?

Self-containment rule

We propose that freedom campers must use a certified self-contained vehicle to stay in any area covered by this rule.

This means that the vehicle has been inspected and certified as meeting the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard (or its equivalent). To meet the standard, a freedom camping vehicle must have an onboard toilet and be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. To find out more about the New Zealand Self-Containment Standard, visit our FAQs page.

We consider freedom campers travelling in these vehicles can camp responsibly in most places in Auckland, because they don't require access to public facilities to meet their basic daily needs.

Campers in vehicles that aren't self-contained would be reliant on Auckland's limited public facilities to meet their basic needs, and this poses a risk to the environment and public health.

It makes sense for us to align our expectations for vehicle self-containment with the New Zealand Standard. Referencing an existing certification process that is widely used by the industry and other councils will make compliance simpler for people who own or hire vehicles, including those from outside Auckland. It will also make checking compliance more efficient for our enforcement staff.

Do you support the proposed self-containment rule? Yes – freedom camping vehicles should be certified self-contained UNLESS staying in a serviced area (noting that there are no serviced areas in the current proposal)

No – I support another rule about self-containment (please explain):

Do you support the self-containment rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: The use of non-self-contained vehicles poses a risk to the environment or public health and safety in un-serviced areas

Maximum stay rule

We propose that freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of two nights in the same road or off-road parking area, in any area covered by this rule.

A self-contained freedom camping vehicle must be able to store water and waste for its occupants for at least three days. Having a two-night maximum stay will encourage campers to move on and dump their waste responsibly.

A two-night maximum stay also helps to prevent campers from staying in one parking area long-term, which could impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

We think two nights strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors to Auckland time to explore and enjoy an area and support its local businesses.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed maximum stay rule? No – freedom campers should be able to stay a maximum of one night in the same road or off-road parking area

No – I support another maximum stay rule (please explain):

Do you support the maximum stay rule because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view: Requiring vehicles to move on the following morning will prevent campers from blocking others' access to parking or other amenities during the day, and prevent longer-term stays

Another reason (please explain):

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

Set departure time rule

We propose that freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 9am on the day of departure, in any area covered by this rule.

We think 9am strikes the right balance between protecting public access and giving visitors a more enjoyable experience during their stay in Auckland.

A set departure time of 9am ensures turnover of parking spaces, protecting fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of an area during standard business hours.

Having a departure time rule also supports the enforcement of the maximum stay rule, by making it easier to determine whether someone had intended to stay another night.

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Note: areas with high traffic volumes before 9am will usually have parking restrictions in place, and freedom camping vehicles must comply with these.

Do you support the proposed set departure time rule? No – freedom campers should have to vacate their parking space by 8am on the day of departure

No – I support another set departure time rule (please explain):

Do you support the set departure time rule because, in your view:

Is this because, in your view:

Another reason (please explain):

No-return period rule

We propose that freedom campers can't return to stay overnight in the same road or off-road parking area for two weeks, in any area covered by this rule.

We think allowing people to return to an area after two weeks strikes the right balance between protecting public access, and allowing campers to return to a favourite spot during a longer stay.

A no-return period helps to prevent campers from moving their vehicle a very short distance to get around the maximum stay rule and stay in one location for long periods. Long stays impact fair access to shared parking and amenities for other users of the area (including other campers).

If freedom camping starts to cause problems, we think this is better managed by putting extra restrictions in that area (by designating it in Schedule 2 of the Bylaw).

Do you support the proposed no-return period rule? Yes – freedom campers shouldn't be able to return to stay in the same road or parking area within a two-week period

No – I support another no-return period rule (please explain):

Do you support the no-return period rule because, in your view: A two-week non-return period helps prevent people staying in one area long-term, which protects access to shared parking and amenities for other users

Another reason (please explain):
