Appendix G: What the public value about Hibiscus and Bays parks

People in the online survey conducted prior to the preparation of the draft local parks management plan were asked which parks they valued and why. A number of people mentioned specific parks many of these were coastal reserves or larger parks. The reasons given for why these were valued were predominantly around these being spaces to enjoy the outdoors, un-spoilt, un-built nature, wide open spaces, a great place to walk the dog, spend time with family, or enjoy peace and quiet. Parks are valued because they are serene and open to the local community to enjoy and escape from the business of daily life.

There were calls to maintain the casual beach atmosphere of the Hibiscus Coast beaches and parks. It was also suggested the plan encourage diversity, safety and access, with particular reference to water-based activity diversity in a manner that facilitates safe and enjoyable experiences for ocean users. Submitters requested that all parks are age and ability friendly, appropriate for the disabled and elderly.

The importance for exercising outdoors was also raised; to provide for physical exercise at multiple levels of people's physical ability. Parks offer mental stimulation through exposure to history, art and natural science. They also provide an opportunity for people to reconnect with nature by personal experience, through volunteer programmes etc.
