189	Alan Cole	Support	5431-8	Horticulture New Zealand: Pukekohe Vegetable Growers Association	General	Chapter A Introduction	A1 Background	Amend 1.5 'Our Rural and Coastal Environment' to include new text ' The productive capacity of the rural and coastal environment is critical to the wellbeing of Auckland's residents and the New Zealand economy. To maintain and enhance the rural production system the PAUP must: Recognise Nationally Significant Rural Land, Provide for Regionally Significant Rural Production, Achieve Economic Development Targets, Protect the Food Supply and Support Post Harvest Production. Rural production systems are dependent on the locational advantages Auckland provides through the high quality land resource, rural water resources and for the horticultural sector; post harvest activities including packhouses and under-glass protected cropping horticultural activities. The rural economy supports communities and rural production defines much of the rural landscape. '
189	Alan Cole	Support	5431-9	Horticulture New Zealand: Pukekohe Vegetable Growers Association	General	Chapter A Introduction	A1 Background	Amend 1.6 'Our Economy' to read 'Auckland's rural areas also contribute significantly to its economic success. In our coastal environment, aquaculture provides opportunities for sustainable economic growth. The Hunua and Waitakere Ranges in turn provide a significant amount of the water resources for the urban area while surface and groundwater resources support rural economic success. '

189	Alan Cole	Support	5431-16	Horticulture New Zealand: Pukekohe Vegetable Growers Association	RPS	Issues	B1.1 Enabling quality urban growth	Add new text 'There are long-term consequences of prolific subdivision across rural areas, the fragmentation of productive land, the domestication and commercialisation of rural landscapes, the introduction of sensitive land uses into working environments and the inefficient use of developable land. Inappropriate choices on greenfield expansion will also compromise regionally significant rural production systems. Around 5.5% of New Zealand's productive land resource is versatile land. Versatile land is land suitable for high value horticultural production because it has a range of enabling factors such as high quality soil, water, frost free climate, shelter, access to labour, transport, close markets and an enabling rule framework that discourages subdivision and land fragmentation.'
189	Alan Cole	Support	5431-17	Horticulture New Zealand: Pukekohe Vegetable Growers Association	RPS	Issues	B1.1 Enabling quality urban growth	Add new text 'Between 1990 and 2008 29% of New Zealand's available versatile land has been converted to new urban areas. Urbanisation is a trend that is unlikely to be reversible. Marlborough (59%), Hawke's Bay (49%), Waikato (36%) and Auckland (35%), have seen the highest level of conversion. Planning mechanisms focussed on soil protection have been unhelpful because they indirectly target the problem which is subdivision for rural residential purposes. There are two things that are required to prevent further degradation of the versatile land resource: Maintenance of an operating environment that encourages rural production activities on versatile land, and Prohibition or prevention by other means of subdivision for rural residential purposes on versatile land. Greenfield expansion must not compromise the regionally significant rural production systems. Inappropriate choices could lead to the removal of versatile land from the production system or constraints on production activities, through reverse sensitivity effects, particularly at the RUB interface.'

189	Alan Cole	Support	5431-21	Horticulture New Zealand: Pukekohe Vegetable Growers Association	RPS	Issues	B1.2 Enabling economic wellbeing	Add text to Rural and Coastal Economy section reading 'Auckland supports a Regionally Significant Rural Production system. The system is complex and diverse and involves a number of integrated elements. For example in the horticultural sector the production system requires access to land, soil, water, gas, transport linkages, post-harvest facilities, labour. Supporting rural production and the economic benefits it achieves is not just about protecting elements such as soil, it is about addressing the system as a whole.'
189	Alan Cole	Support	5431-22	Horticulture New Zealand: Pukekohe Vegetable Growers Association	RPS	Issues	B1.2 Enabling economic wellbeing	Add text to Rural and Coastal Economy reading 'Developing and enhancing an innovative rural and maritime economy is an Auckland Plan target which seeks to increase the value added to the Auckland economy by rural sectors (including rural production, complementary rural enterprises, tourism and visitor experiences in rural areas) by 50% by 2040. The approach of the Unitary Plan is pivotal in achieving this target.. 2% to 3% of Auckland's GDP is attributable to agriculture and agricultural services and processing from the region. This is about $1.22 billion annually. The value of Auckland's rural land for rural production extends beyond the territorial boundaries and influences the national wellbeing of New Zealand. Over the past 20 years, horticulture exports have grown from $NZ 200 million to $NZ 2.23 billion. The area of horticultural crops has also increased 40% to 121,000 ha in just over 10 years. Including domestic sales, the horticulture industry is worth $NZ 5 billion making it New Zealand's sixth largest export industry, and it employs 50,000 people in eight key growing regions – one of which is Auckland.'
